HUNGARY IS HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR "INTERNATIONAL CRIME"

ENFORCEMENT OF N. R. A. CODES IS NEW BOARDS' JOB

Rulings Decided At White House

SPECTACULAR PHASE ENDS

SPECIAL TO SUNDAY HERALD.

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telephatic Messages Ordinance, 1894, Received October 13, 4:09 p.m.)

Washington, Yesterday. Important rulings bearing on the administration of the National Recovery Act were made at the White House yesterday, when President Roosevelt conferred with the General Counsel of the N. R. A. and head of the committee of six, Mr. Donald R. Richberg, the Attorney-General, Mr. Homer S. Cummings, and the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, Mr. Garland S. Ferguson.

After the discussions, Mr. Richberg announced that the enforcement of the Act would be handled through an informal working agreement between the various Government agencies rather than through the creation of a special judicial board.

President Roosevelt said that Code enforcement was the principal object of the new N. R. A. machinery and the other Government agencies which were being established. The Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission would work with closest co-operation to speed enforcement, he added.

Mr. Clay Williams, Chairman of the board of five, which is administering the N. R. A. in lieu of General Hugh Johnson, former sole administrator, assured press representatives that the business of the National Recovery Administration had passed its spectacular and glorious phase, and henceforth the changes in the Code structures would be cautious. — United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

DEVALUATION PROSPECTS

SPECIAL TO SUNDAY HERALD.

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telephatic Messages Ordinance, 1894, Received October 13, 4:09 p.m.)

Washington, Yesterday. The United States Treasury issued a statement yesterday, showing that silver money in circulation in September amounted to U. S. $799,043,682, a new high record which was U. S. $48,414,505 above the August figure.

Washington Observers continue to believe that any nearby devaluation will be via reducing the dollar's silver content rather than its gold content. They point out that the President has almost unlimited power for reducing the silver content irrespective of the reduction of the gold content. They believe a further reduction in the gold content is out of the question.

London Not Surprised By Silver Reaction

London, Yesterday. The London bullion market was not surprised by the decline in silver yesterday, which was partly due to profit-taking and partly to a change of sentiment on the grounds that the bull account was overbuilt, though the continuance of the United States programme is not questioned. — United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

STRANGE SISTERHOOD

By J. E. GURDON

SUVAROV and Yukio went out to the tundra, their eyes fixed on the southern sky. Under clouds like ribbed grey silk two swans were wheeling whitely on lazy wings. Warped and stripped Siberian larches clustered together in thin sad woods. Already the snows of early autumn salted the marshes. "Your Englishman is late," the Japanese smiled as he spoke. "Yes, they are late." "They?" "He brings his wife," grunted Suvarov. Still smiling, Yukio glanced at the smoke hanging low over Klutchevskaja's crater. The great volcano's hidden fires reddened the pall. "Brings his wife?" he echoed. "So I understand!" The Russian's tufted beard stiffened aggressively. "Your meaning?" A shrug and a scarcely perceptible spread of gauntleted hands. "That I now understand your anxieties as host, I must confess that we others have been puzzled. We asked ourselves why such preparations should be made for the arrival of an English airman. Why, for example, should the east laboratory be turned into a sleeping room and the Lamut woman Tchaplina be hired to do work which we have always done ourselves? This is an international weather station, not a guest house. But now, as I said, I understand. "They are coming," interrupted Suvarov. "I hear an engine." Intently the Japanese listened, then softly laughed. "It is true," he agreed. "They are coming, but they are still a long way off. You have the ears of a hunter." Abruptly he turned, hearing the tinkling of bells behind him. "Hoi! Tchaplina has adorned herself to welcome the westerners! They should be honoured. For myself, though, I think I had better attend to the work." The Lamut woman stepped aside to let him pass, then moved to where Suvarov stood and listened. With the patience of her race she waited, hands held low and clasped in front of the stiff fur robe that reached to her knees. Her face, like the face of some impassive Mongolian Gnome, brooded beneath a hood of wolverine skins. Her eyes were like black and polished almonds. As though suddenly sensing her presence Suvarov spun on his heel. "They will soon be here," he said, then paused frowning his lip. "She will soon be here. You must attend her well, Tchaplina. You know why I have chosen you from among all the other women of the furts?" The Lamut nodded, gesturing towards her mouth. Suvarov chuckled. "Quite so. Because you are dumb, and a dumb woman may be worth many sables." Again he paused, watching her narrowly, testing the effect of each word as he went on. "If you serve her well—and me too—I shall give you sables. For the present—see here." Hands dived into the pockets of his coat. From the left he drew out a flutful of empty cartridges; from the right, a cheap horn-handled knife in a sheath of scarlet leather. "You understand?" Once more she nodded, her features no longer impassive. Fingers crooked as she reached for the treasures. Cartridges to sew on her garments in glittering bands or spokes; a gaudy knife to scrape the flesh from reindeer hides. Not a woman of the furts but would envy her. "You understand?" repeated Suvarov. Tchaplina's lips parted to release one short inarticulate sound. She understood. Half-savage she might be, all her life spent in desolate sub-Arctic wastes, yet she knew as well as any girl what was expected of serving maids by those who gave presents. Secret notes to be smuggled; assignments to be arranged; her feminine soul stirred pleasantly to the eternal thrill of romantic stratagems. "It is well," approved Suvarov, then straightened himself, for out of the south a winged speck was growing steadily larger. With the landing of the big-engined machine Tchaplina drew back to be merged in a horde of shrill Lamuts scampering out from their tents of skins. The door of the monoplane's cabin slid back and two fur-clad figures jumped down, the girl small, slim, and delicately made, the man very tall and loosely moving. Suvarov stepped forward followed by Yukio, now returned from the station. Hard on his heels pressed the two Japanese youths who completed the meteorological staff. Intently watching the strangers Tchaplina noticed that, although the man held out a hand in easy salutation his wife stopped dead in her tracks at the sight of Suvarov. The Russian's words rang out clearly in the cold, dry air. "I regret my inability to greet you in your own language, Colonel Ducane, but I can assure you that our meeting gives me none the less satisfaction." He broke off with a little bow to the girl. Tchaplina saw that she shrunk, and that her hand went out to touch her husband. "Unless I have been misinformed, however, your honoured wife is a complot of mine by birth. Perhaps she will consent to act as interpreter." White teeth flashed as the Englishman smiled. He replied in Russian, correct but slow and rigid. "I think you for your welcome. Yes, my wife is—or was—a Russian. If we have any difficulty in understanding one another, of course, she will help. For the moment, though, I think she should rest. It is a long flight from Karafuto, and for many hours we were flying blind through heavy weather. A little later, perhaps—" "But, of course, of course!"—Suvarov's manner blended consideration with apology. Turning to the staring crowd of Lamuts, he called imperatively, "Tchaplina!" "She is a Lamut," he added in explanation, "but has some knowledge of western ways. I feared that a bride, fresh from civilisation, might feel a little lost in the wilds without even a maid to attend her. Unfortunately, Tchaplina is a mute—but she has a very understanding mind." Although he spoke with hidden irony, the words contained no more than truth: the Lamut woman's shrewdness was at work like a mole in loosened soil. Already she knew that the young wife stood in terror of Suvarov, that he planned to use this power, and that the Englishman suspected nothing. One other truth she learned as she meekly obeyed Suvarov's summons, for in that moment the girl was looking at her husband. Such appeal for love and trust Tchaplina had never seen. A blind, dull-witted husband, she decided, trudging ahead to the bungalow. He had read no message in his wife's eyes, even when she begged to be allowed to stay and help with the machine; had only laughed and pinched her cheek, and told her to run along rest. Decidedly a fool; yet the girl loved him. That made a difference. Head bent, she plodded on, hands thrust deep into pockets, fingers fondling the cartridges and knife. Later on there might be sables. That made a difference also. In the room which once was the eastern laboratory camp beds had been set up and simple furniture primly posed across the angles. Even a mirror hung on one of the walls. Katrina Ducane snatched off her leather helmet and flung it on a bed, shaking bronze ringlets. Slowly she gazed around then sped to the mirror. Fascinated yet shocked, the Lamut watched a play of powder puff and lipstick magically brought out from secret recesses. In all Kamchatka not another woman had seen such shamelessness. Yet she found herself strangely drawn to the husky with the pale oval face and scarlet lips. She even liked her pointed and glittering nails, although well aware that such vanity went with unimaginable wickedness: for Tchaplina, though a Shaman, had once heard a Chinese Christian

Fox-Trimmed Cape In Vogue

Striking Notes In Modes Of Moderns

FOUR makes more appeal for the town toilettes and in the coats and capes for evening. The fox-trimmed short circular cape is as fashionable as ever, for it is good in differing lengths in fur, velvet and fabric. Real sealskin "tippets" trimmed with ermine can be worn with a small muff, and make a charming completion to a simply-cut frock of black wool or velvet.

One of the striking notes in the modern mode is the curious combination of intense neatness and simplicity of cut and style, allied to the luxurious feminine trend of forty years ago.

This alliance is helpful to the practical woman, who has to make her clothes useful as well as becoming. In reality dress is far less difficult if it can be changed for afternoons and dinner time. It is always easier to find the right toilet for a special occasion than to make one do for many!

SHORT CAPES FILL AUTUMN NEED

BEFORE full-length fur coats come into their own short capes will fill an early autumn need perfectly.

INTERESTING REVIVAL IN COLOUR COMBINE

DULL-SURFACED SATIN

OVER a black slimly-cut dress a coat of jade green cloth is worn with a black felt hat trimmed with loops of jade moiré-ribbon. The cowl-like collar of this coat is of black broadtail. Black and brown is an interesting revival in colour combination.

A three-quarter tunic-like coat of brown face-cloth is buttoned up with black-lacquered buttons and worn with a lacquered belt of the same, the dress beneath being composed of dull-surfaced black satin.

Luminous Evening Fabrics

Sapphire Blue Satin

SLIMMER lines are noticeable in purple mat crepe for a gown with a slashed back and long surplice panel falling from the shoulders. In another model a new cellophane fabric of luminous blue sheathes the body. This fabric glitters again in black and bright red, the latter forming a jumper blouse top for a three-piece dinner ensemble, completed by a half-length black coat.

Luminous dark sapphire blue satin and silver lame introduce other evening blouse themes for black ankle-length skirts.

WHICH SIDE DO YOU SLEEP ON

Experimenters Find No Preference

IT was long held that right-handed people generally sleep on their right side, while left-handed people go to sleep on the left side. Careful experiments which have been carried out recently show that this is not really the case.

When 150 right-handed persons were examined it was found that there was no great preference for sleeping on one side or the other, although in the case of left-handed people the majority preferred the left side.

When, in the course of experiments, sleepers were asked to go to rest on many nights on their habitual side, and so many nights on the other side, it was found that they got to sleep more easily when on their normal side than when they were in the unusual position.

The doctors, therefore, feel that people, whether they be grown-ups or boys or girls, should make a practice of sleeping on the side which they usually favour.

BLACK FOUNDATION TO GOOD DRESSING

JACKET MORE SEASONABLE

THERE are a number of cheerful changes in the mode that by means of variation make for newness in styles. Coloured cloth and wool jackets can be worn over simple black dresses.

The importance of black as a foundation to good dressing is again a prominent factor. The coloured jacket does convey a sense of novelty; indeed, the jacket of many shapes must be reckoned with in the winter mode. Sometimes the cape, also in colour contrast to the frock, may be preferred, but the jacket is more seasonable.

SCRUBBING BRUSHES

MANY people complain that the bristles in their scrubbing brushes work loose after they have been in use for a short time. This is due to the fact that the brushes have not been soaked before use. Soak new brushes for at least twenty-four hours in cold water to which has been added a good lump of common salt. This will tighten up the bristles so that they will not come out, and become loose when used in hot water.

What To Choose In Furs

DARKER SHADES

(By The Hon. Mrs. C. W. FORESTER)

IN fur modes, as in other branches of dress, there is a marked difference between the choice for town and country wear. One can obtain inexpensive pelts for wear in either case. Imitation sable, seal, mink, astrakhan, Persian lamb, and fine broadtail, even ermine, are better left alone. With the exception of astrakhan for country wear women will look far smarter in coats of rougher and less expensive skins.

American lamb, caracul, and many of the sheep variety are delightful for long, cosy coats, suitable for open cars and rough wear. Natural musquash is one of the best of the coarser furs. Deer and pony skin should no longer be harsh, and show a patterned surface with plenty of light and shade. They are at their best as short walking coats, tailored. Nutria, for a big wrap, has the advantage of looking well for any occasion and, used for large collars, cuffs, and muff, is excellent with cloth and tweed.

Either lynx, otter, or beaver makes a good country choice, and looks suitable with leather coats and big tweed ulsters.

Gun-Metal And Pewter

Gun-metal or many variations in pewter-shaded furs are again popular this season. There is also a tendency to dye certain skins like fox to all sorts of weird shades. There are pink, blue, and green foxes, so cleverly done as to be no longer suggestive of theatrical properties.

For town, when expense has to be considered, the new colours in mole-skin will appeal to many women. Various tones of grey-beige are most becoming. For the blonde there are attractive grades in a rich cocoa and coffee, and some brown-henna hues that are most uncommon. Circular capes, just clearing the waist-line, are clever models in mole-skin and in real seal, trimmed with a border of fox dyed to match, or to form a contrast. Real sealskin coats are treated with respect. Their colouring is beautiful, their weight bearing no connection with the sealskin of the Victorian trousseaux!

Another use for sealskin is as a lavish trimming to the real ermine of snowy whiteness in a luxurious evening wrap. Sealskin, like sable or mink, is essentially for town wear, and in its new rendering will be distinctively fashionable.

"CROWN" JEWELS

THE motif for the jewellery of 1934 has already been evolved. It is a crown—in honour of the Jubilee year.

Women will wear the new crown ornaments in the same way that they are now wearing stars. Crown brooches, earrings and necklets are already going to South Africa and Australia.

Muff As Part Of The Dressing Scheme

THE SLIT-SKIRT

FUR bands used skilfully help to improve the slimness of the silhouette. A long coat of gun-metal cloth with bands of dark grey broadtail may be lined with one of the new black-and-grey-striped Vicunas. Possibly there will be a hat of the cloth trimmed with fur, and shaped after the turban idea. A small muff to match may also be included, for there is a great effort being made to bring back the muff as part of the dress-scheme.

If elaboration of the costume be desired, this vogue may gain away, but women to-day dislike complications that interfere with their activities. The slit-skirt is an aid to freedom, but a muff may prove an encumbrance.

CHANGE IN COLOURS

THE lingerie must be tinted occasionally to preserve the dainty appearance. A faded blue garment will tint a delicate orchid with the aid of pink dye. A pale yellow will shade into a delicate green if dipped in blue dye and a pink dye will shade the yellow into a lovely melon or shell pink.

SOUTH CHINA "B" CHECKED IN SOCCER CHAMPIONSHIP RACE

VOLUNTEERS GYMKHANA GREAT SUCCESS

100 Competitors Vie For Honours

BERYL FAIR AND BOB CHARLES SHINE

Close on 100 competitors yesterday took part in the annual Gymkhana of the Hong Kong Volunteer Defence Corps on the Hong Kong Polo Club ground.

Captain A. H. Potts won the Downbiggin Trophy, presented by Col. H. B. L. Downbiggin, D.S.O. for the best individual aggregate; and No. 1 Sub Section, under Lance Corporal L. G. Robertson, won the Aggregate Cup, presented by Col. L. G. Bird, D.S.O., former Commandant of the H.K. Volunteers, for the best aggregate throughout the Gymkhana.

There was a large number of spectators present, the distinguished guests being: H. B. the Governor, Sir William Peel, K.C.M.G., K.B.E., and Lady Peel; H. E. Major-General O. C. Barrett, C.B., C.M.G., C.B.E., D.S.O., and Mrs. Barrett; Sir Thomas Southern, C.M.G., K.B.E., and Lt.-Col. H. B. L. Downbiggin, D.S.O., Commandant of the H. K. Volunteers.

One Accident Occurs

Only one accident occurred during the afternoon, Mr. H. B. Charles falling from his mount during the Chariot Race. He had a nasty fall and received a cut above the eye, but later won two events during the afternoon.

The eight events on the programme were all well supported, competition between the riders being very keen. The prizes at the conclusion were presented by Lady Peel, prior to which Captain Potts, on behalf of the Machine Gun Troop, thanked all for their attendance and paid special thanks to Messrs. Groucher and Moxon for their generous donations towards the prizes.

Popular Victory

Miss Beryl Fair scored a popular victory in the opening item, the musical chairs, doing very well against a very large field of competitors. The judging, on account of the big number, was somewhat difficult in this event.

The Chariot Race provided the novelty and thrill of the afternoon, proving to be the best on the programme.

This event required little skill, and of the 12 competing teams, only two succeeded in finishing the course; they were Miss Betty Fair's team and Mrs. Parker's team.

The Tent Pegging Competition was disappointing and did not come up to the standard of last year. None of the competitors succeeded in pegging the shot during the three times. Captain Potts, who won the event last year, was just beaten by Lt. Mead. Mr. Charles was favourite in this event, but his mount fell must have affected his aim.

Peggy Kitchin Wins

Peggy Kitchin who won the Class "A" Children's Riding Competition rode remarkably well and thoroughly deserved her win. All the children in this event rode and handled their mounts extremely well. The Class "C" for children from 3-4 years of age provided amusement in that the smallest competitor, Master Anthony Cuthbert, rode the biggest Shetland mount, a pony. He was awarded a special prize.

Wins for Mr. Charles

Mr. Charles scored a popular victory in the Handy Hunter Competition for China Ponies, while Mr. Wall's Australian mount cleared the obstacles extremely well. Mr. Slater proved to be the only English Class entrant, but made two faults. The hope that more entrants in this class would be received next year was expressed by Captain Potts at the prize-giving.

Mr. Charles again proved an easy winner in the Javelin Throwing Competition, although there were several other close contenders.

The Results

The following were the complete results.

LAWRENCE BREAKS ANOTHER RECORD

MAKES CLEAN SWEEP IN LOCAL AQUATICS

KWOK BETTERS HIS OWN MARK

BY WINNING THE 880 YARDS FREE-STYLE SWIMMING CHAMPIONSHIP IN RECORD TIME AT THE V.R.C. GALA LAST NIGHT, W. LAWRENCE NOT ONLY EQUALLED THE REMARKABLE FEAT OF J. R. JOHNSTONE IN 1929, WHEN HE WON ALL FOUR CHAMPIONSHIPS FROM 100 YARDS TO HALF A MILE, BUT HAS BEATEN THE EXISTING RECORDS FOR EACH OF THE FOUR DISTANCES.

Never seriously challenged, Lawrence swam a well-judged race to win in the record time of 11 mins. 55.25 secs., beating J. R. Johnstone's 1929 record by two full seconds.

W. T. Campbell caused a sensation by leading for half the distance and by beating Lionel Roza-Pereira, the title holder, by one second. This is the first time that the South Wales Borderers and Army champion has succeeded in beating Roza-Pereira, four-year champion over this distance.

KWOK CHUN-HANG, CHINA'S BREAST-STROKE CHAMPION, WHO WILL TAKE PART IN THE MELBOURNE CENTENARY CELEBRATION CHAMPIONSHIP IN JANUARY, WON THE 100 YARDS BREAST-STROKE TITLE ONCE AGAIN, AND, IN DOING SO, CLIPPED 5 FULL SECONDS OFF HIS 1932 RECORD.

Beating L. Oliveira, the Hong Kong University crack and Shanghai Interport trials swimmer, in the 50 Yards sprint championship, T. Paget won his second championship title in the record time of 25.45 secs. This is the first time that the championship has been won under 25 seconds.

Edward Roza, concluded an extraordinary season in local aquatics, during which every swimming record in the Colony has been smashed, by winning the Diving event, without challenge, to record his eighth win in succession, a record in itself.

Among the distinguished guests present last night were H. E. Major-General O. C. Barrett, C.B., C.M.G., C.B.E., D.S.O., and Mrs. Barrett; Sir Thomas Southern, K.B.E., and Mr. Barrett, the Hon. Sir Thomas Southern, K.B.E., President of the V. R. C.

It is announced that the prizes for the championship events will be given out after the Harbour Race, which will be swum on Saturday, October 27. Both the Ladies' and Men's races will be run in conjunction as one race.

Edward Roza, being unchallenged, delighted the audience with a series of well executed dives from the high and low spring-boards, demonstrating without doubt that he is the best exponent of this art in the Colony.

Miss Doris Hunt conceded 18 seconds in the Ladies' Handicap race over 100 Yards and only just failed to catch Miss Marie Roza, who swam very well to win.

The water polo match was well contested. After a goalless first half, Fullagher scored for his side, but Campbell levelled the score. A. A. Roza placed his team again ahead, but Lawrence made the score 2-1 just before the close of play.

The results were as follows:—

880 Yards free style (Championship):

1. W. Lawrence, Time 11 mins. 55.25 secs. (record).

2. W. T. Campbell, Time 12.7.3.5 secs.

3. Dead heat—L. Roza-Pereira and A. A. Roza. Time, 12 mins. 8.3.5 secs.

1933 champion—L. Roza-Pereira, Time, 12 mins. 8 secs.

Old Record—J. R. Johnstone (1929). Time 11 mins. 57.2.5 secs.

100 Yards breast-stroke (Championship):

1. Kwok Chun-hang, Time, 72 secs. (Record).

2. E. M. Marques, Time 79 secs.

3. E. Fullagher.

1933 Champion—Lam Yiu, Time 78.5 secs.

Old Record—Kwok Chun-hang, (1932) Time, 77 secs.

50 Yards free style (Championship):

1. T. Paget, Time 25.4.5 secs. (Record).

2. L. Oliveira, Time 26.3.5 secs.

HONG KONG BEAT KOWLOON TO END BOWLS SEASON

Aitkenhead Shield Won By 44 Shots

SECOND SUCCESSIVE TRIUMPH

Hong Kong recorded their second successive victory and their third triumph in the series of seven matches for the Aitkenhead Shield, when they beat Kowloon by 44 shots on the K.B.G.C. green yesterday.

Kowloon won the shield for three years in succession after the competition was inaugurated in 1928; Hong Kong won it in 1931, last year, and again this year. Last year they beat Kowloon by 36 shots.

WEAK BORDERERS XI FORCE DRAW

SPOILS DIVIDED IN ALL PREMIER LEAGUE GAMES

LINCOLNS SURPRISED TWICE

SOUTH China "B," favoured in some quarters for the premier soccer league championship faltered yesterday when they could only hold a greatly depleted Borderers eleven to a draw. A "hat trick" by Jones checked their triumphant progress.

A curious feature in yesterday's play was that all the First Division games were drawn!

The Lincolns were taken by surprise in the second half of their "gift" match against the weakened Recreio team and dropped a valuable point, while in the Third Division they sustained their first setback in two seasons. The East Lanes won in this section and are now firmly situated at the head of the table.

RECREIO PROVE BETTER THAN THE LINCOLNS THOUGHT

Force Draw After Two Down At Half Time

RIDLEY OUTSTANDING

The Lincolns had the shock of their lives in their encounter with the Recreio at King's Park yesterday when the final score read two goals each.

Having much the better of the play at the commencement of the game, the Lincolns took things easily and did not extend themselves to any great extent. Two goals appeared to them to be a safe margin.

Ridley had a great opportunity to display his all-round abilities, and his services made him indispensable. In the right place at the right moment, Ridley's efforts were quiet and unobtrusive but their value was made apparent on many occasions. Baldry and Clayton put over many accurate centres, and though Malpas and his aides made supreme efforts to convert them, they were generally bundled off the ball at the crucial moment by the Recreio defence.

Ash had a very strenuous day, but for the main part was equal to his responsibilities, his accurate passing deserving special mention. Robson and Dudley played very well in the first half, but later deteriorated, mainly through their being called to assist in a different sphere.

Beltrao In Goal

The Recreio were without the leadership of A. V. Gosano, who, injured in the mid-week match, will probably have to abstain from football for the next three weeks. Beltrao, another invalid from a previous game, turned out in the goal-keeping position, a place he held several seasons ago, and Sousa was brought in place of "A.V."

B. Gosano, who opened as inside-left, dropped back to the pivotal position just after the re-start and his play from that period showed a decided improvement. Receiving valuable assistance from Marques and Gonsalves, he combined to make an effective stumbling block for the Lincolns attack.

Silva-Netto gave a very sound performance both in clearing and tackling, but Bowen, though he improved a great deal, opened very shakily.

Boltrao felt rather out of position for a start, but when he settled down his play left no cause for complaint. The Lincolns opened the scoring through McGuinness who sent in a lobbing shot which Beltrao mis-handled, the ball just going over the line. Within a few minutes McGuinness added another, this time through a mis-understanding between Bowen and the goal-keeper.

On the resumption of play the Recreio assumed the ascendancy and on many occasions completely outwitted the Lincolns defence only to lose the ball in some inexplicable manner. Sousa, eventually, with a glorious header reduced the lead and shortly afterwards Alves obtained the equalizer with the best goal of the season. Jumping for a first-timer at an almost impossible angle, his shot rebounded against the net-bar.

ARTILLERY STAGE GREAT RALLY

East Lanes Drop A Point

A smart encounter was witnessed at Sookunpoo yesterday when the East Lancashire drew with the Royal Artillery, each team scoring two goals.

The East Lancashire had the best of the game during the first half and they scored the only goal through a clever shot by Lieut. Salmon from 25 yards. Salmon indeed showed his usual prowess throughout the game, playing in the right wing position.

The whole of the East Lanes forward line worked perfectly, but Wood and Tuley, on the left flank, were outstanding.

Wood unfortunately received a nasty injury to his knee just before the final whistle, and was forced to retire from the game.

For the Gunners, Wroe and Clancy in the defence, played a grand game, and they had plenty to do too, but they had a very dependable goalkeeper with them in Durham, who showed that he had plenty of foresight. His excellent saves towards the end of the game undoubtedly saved the situation for the Artillerymen.

Pardee, whose prowess is already well-known was again good. His departure from the Colony in the near future will be a big loss to the Artillery.

The East Lancashire scored their first goal within two minutes of the start when Salmon scored from 25 yards.

The East Lanes, added their second goal through Tuley who sent in a grand shot from 20 yards.

Smith opened the Gunners' score with a smart shot from short range, and good work by Edmunds, Hopkins, Wood and Knight was rewarded when, following a skilful run around the Lancashire goal, Wood received his chance and netted the ball with a smart shot. It was a deserving goal.

KOWLOON ARE LUCKY TO DRAW

Police Held After Listless Game

At Kowloon, before a small attendance, an uninspiring match between the K.F.C. and the Police, entirely devoid of thrills, or even good football, resulted in a draw.

Both teams made alterations. For the Police, Shepherd came in at inside-left, in place of Changings, and Kowloon played Whitehead at left-half in place of Pope, bringing in Lee (who had played in the Second Division match which had just concluded) at inside-right.

Neither side showed any signs of settling down, play being disjointed and very ragged. Cord, however, was called upon early, and saved well from Green. The Police were concentrating on Green, and the latter flashed across several good centres, but the "inside" men, especially Johnston, were slow, and had a sorry knack of hampering each other, instead of letting one man take the ball.

The Kowloon defence, Cord, Everest and Eastman, played well at this stage, tackling and clearing

OF IMPORTANCE TO MOTHERS — SOME "KLIM" FACTS —

The casein (the curd of milk) of KLIM precipitates in fine, soft, friable curds which are easily digested and assimilated. The value of such is indicated by the fine curd characteristic of breast milk.

In the Klim spray process the large fat globules of the fresh milk are broken into very small globules, THUS EXPOSING A LARGER SURFACE for digestion and assimilation.

These advantages undoubtedly account for the better growth curves obtained with Klim. A famous pediatricist found that on the average, children gained weight faster on Klim.

KLIM is a product of the Borden Co. known as the largest manufacturers of milk products in the world. It is your assurance of a food of the highest integrity.

THIS NEW AGE OF SNOBBERY Novelist Attacks Modern Self-Satisfaction Creed That Affects To Despise Culture

(By GILBERT FRANKAU)

IT is a long time since Thackeray wrote his "Book of Snobs." But how I wish I had had his pen to write a modern sequel. Perhaps I shall attempt it one day. Even if I fail, it will be worth while trying.

And, after all, having been brought up to a healthy contempt for all forms of snobbery by a father who never forgot to remind me that I was the son of a cigar-merchant; and a mother who used to say, "Any fool with a bank balance can get into Society. Most people will go anywhere for a well-cooked chop."

My mother had a sense of the realities, even though she did write novels—and she was an excellent cook, too!

Those were the days during and just after the South African War, when gold was booming even as it is now; and houses in Park-lane were fetching the most fantastic prices; and the mythical subaltern of cavalry, asked to state the function of his particular service in warfare, was presumed to have answered, "The function of the cavalry in modern warfare is to give tone to what might otherwise be merely a vulgar brawl."

"Hol-Polloi Of The Past"

Sir Gorgius Midas and Mrs. Ponsonby de Tompkins, symbols of the multi-millionaire and the "climbing" hostess, were not yet gone from among us. And the highbrow form of snobbery—still not entirely suppressed—had only just ceased to be represented by the "greenery-gallery Grosvenor-Gallery" young man posing aesthetically by a china vase with a golden lily in his hand.

People, moreover, could still refer to themselves as being out of the "top drawer" without fear of ridicule: a feat which, I am credibly informed, is barely possible today.

In the City, too, men of substance—and even men of no substance—were easily distinguished from the "hol-polloi" by their spats and their top hats. Indeed, I well remember a certain stockbroking friend of my mother's—who, once bought ninety-seven pairs of trousers in one order on hearing that his favourite cutter meditated an early retirement—taking his tennis-racket with him to Throgmorton-street one Saturday morning, "so that people shall understand, Julia, why I happen to be wearing a flannel suit."

How I laughed at poor H. about that. How I laughed when a young friend of my own, newly commissioned to the Household Brigade, told us, "I don't despise Line regiments, you know. I'm only sorry for the poor chaps who have to go into them." What fun we had—my father and mother and I—pricking all the bubbles of Edwardian conceit!

"Inverted Snobbery"

But now that I have lived to see all of those bubbles pricked, and the whole bath of Edwardian self-satisfaction emptied I am not at all sure that I do not prefer the Edwardian form of snobbery to the new snobbery—the "inverted snobbery"—as some folk call it—of this our present age.

For nowadays—or so at least it seems to me—anyone who wishes to write a new Book of Snobs will have to launch his principal shafts at this new snobbery rather than at the old. Admittedly, we no longer gaze at a lord. But we do still gaze—taking him for our social example—at the kind of man who tells us, "None of your public schools or 'varsities for my kids. What's the use of education? Let them start at the bottom like I did and work their way up."

Now, to laugh at a man for wearing his public school or regimental tie does neither him, his public school, nor his regiment any harm.

But to take it for granted, as some people are in danger of taking it for granted, that any man who wears a public school or regimental tie is of necessity a moron is just as ridiculous as to presume that the youth who rides a push-bike is of necessity a finer fellow and a better sportsman than the youth we see at the wheel of some high-powered "straight eight."

The bicyclist may be the better sportsman. He often is. But to presume that he must be the better sportsman is merely snobbery—the wrong-way-round.

It is also snobbery—the wrong-way-round, in my opinion, to imagine that policemen are worthy of sneers because they do not wear regulation boots, do know how to speak French, or do possess a dinner-jacket. And a further excellent example of this new form of self-satisfaction was furnished to me only the other evening at a civic banquet when one gentleman with a knighthood reminded another gentleman with a knighthood of the days when they had been "navvies together" and eaten their lunches out of their handkerchiefs.

There is this new snobbery. A snobbery which affects to despise all culture and all education. A snobbery that pretends, in effect, "Look at me! I was never at a public school. I was not at a university. Aren't I marvellous?"

Challenge To Old Bugbear
Which is a good enough pose in its way—and a magnificent challenge to that bugbear of my own youth, "Privilege." But does that particular bugbear exist any more? Have we not at least thrown down all the Victorian and all the Edwardian barriers of privilege?

I am sure that we have. Just as I am sure—and I speak from some experience—that you will find far less snobbery of any kind in the public school house than the public-house in the university common-room than in the City board-room.

Nevertheless, I cannot conclude this article without warning those whose experience of snobs is less than my own that it is seven-to-four on the man, whether with or without a public school tie, who suggests to you, "Can't we settle this little trouble as between snobs, old boys?" being an undischarged bankrupt, previously cashiered.

SCOUTS CONCERT

Popular Artistes To Aid Programme

BORDERERS' DANCE BAND TO PLAY SELECTIONS

The Scouts of the 4th Hong Kong (Murray) and 4th Kowloon (Garrison) Troops are making preparations for what is hoped to be the best entertainment of its kind ever staged in the Colony.

The concert will be held at the China Fleet Club Theatre on Wednesday, October 24, commencing at 8.45 p.m. sharp. Many popular local artistes will figure on the programme, while the Scouts themselves will be responsible for a Grand Opening and Close as well as intermediate items in each half.

As a specimen of variety, the programme leaves little to be desired, containing within its bounds, songs—tenor and soprano, violin solos, dancing, part singing, humour, piano solos and dance band music in addition to plays and displays by the scouts.

The following artistes have promised their support:—

Mr. Victor Sanders, Professor G. Gonzalez, Miss Helen and Stella Ho, Rev. J. N. Lewis Bryan, Mrs. Sinclair, Messrs. Grenham and Ferguson, and the talented Quartette of the Lincolnshire Regiment—Messrs. King, Trowt, Kime and Goble.

By kind permission of the Officer Commanding and the officers of the South Wales Borderers, the dance band will render popular up-to-date selections.

The proceeds of the Concert are to be devoted to the funds of the 4th Hong Kong and 44th Kowloon Troops.

Tickets at $2.00 (reserved) and $1.00 (unreserved) are now available either from the Scouts or from the Anderson Music Co.

GUARD YOUR HEALTH DURING CHANGING SEASONS

BRIGHT Autumn sunshine—sudden changes—cool evenings make tricky times for normal health. With changing seasons many people find health a problem, and Autumn usually brings its crop of attacks in the form of colds and sore throats. For quick relief from colds 'ASPRO' has fulfilled all claims made for it, and if taken according to the directions it not only quickly ends a cold—it smashes further developments in the form of influenza, and prevents many days laying up in bed. If taken as a gargle according to the direction on the leaflet in the packet 'ASPRO' gives astonishing relief in a very short while. The reason why 'ASPRO' is so valuable for colds, sore throats, and many conditions of illness, is because, after ingestion in the system, it is a powerful germicide, and is anti-pyretic—anti-periodic, and anti-fermentative. 'ASPRO' does not harm the heart, and its standard of purity conforms to the British Pharmacopoeia, the guiding authority of the Medical Profession.

HONG KONG, SUNDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1934.

The Pacific Mandates

It may be doubted whether the Hong Kong public realises how closely we are interested in the arguments that will come up when the Naval Conference meets next year to review the arrangements made by the Washington Conference and the subsequent London Conference. Besides the main purpose of putting a limit to ships of war, or certain classes of them, several very puzzling questions of law and some very delicate questions of sentiment are involved, and the decisions will affect our own dockyard and garrison. Naturally, as suspicions grow like weeds in a heap of fertilizer in this part of the world discretion must be used in discussing these questions; but the fact is that rumours and fanciful embroideries of possible challenges are current anyhow, and a little candid explanation can only do good.

The treaties signed at the two conferences contained provision for periodical revision, and the root question is whether they should merely be renewed or should be revised; and if so what form the revision should take. The clauses of the agreements need not be recapitulated, for they specify the state of affairs that we have become used to during recent years. What concerns us is that the fleets of Great Britain, the U.S.A., and Japan should, so far as capital ships are concerned, be in the proportion of 5-5-3, and that Japan should take under her protection as mandated territories all the Pacific Islands formerly occupied by Germany North of a certain line; while neither of the three States mentioned should fortify as Naval Bases any Pacific port within a certain area prescribed by latitude East and West. The net result was very favourable to Japan so far as defence is concerned, for the advantage of being near its bases more than compensates for the difference in ratio. The efficiency of the air services has enormously increased during the last few years; but the arrangement about the islands removes any danger of other than a long distance attack.

The occupation of Mukden and the condemnation of the Japanese aggression by the League of Nations led to a wave of Jingoism in Japan which led to the Fleet being built up to the limits allowed in the Treaty; to resignation from the League; and to a fear that ports such as Hong Kong and Manila might be used as bases of attack, and a claim that Japan should be allowed a free hand to "maintain peace" in the whole of the Far East. The more extreme party even demanded the total withdrawal of other Powers from the Pacific and objection was even taken to the fortification of the Singapore Base, which was not, of course, included in the non-fortified zone. In fact it must be admitted that the Araki Administration was sailing straight for trouble.

Generally it may be assumed that in the long run, and in the absence of fits of hysteria or intolerable aggression, the policy of a country will be guided by its interests. Discussions took place, and it was pointed out to the Japanese Government that as the Covenant of the League was an integral part of the Treaty of Versailles, the whole of the Treaty obligations must be considered as one whole, and that repudiation of Washington and London added to resignation from the League must throw the whole Pacific question into the melting pot. Japan stood to lose the security of the islands through the guarantee of the other Powers, and in return there would only be the certainty that the ports she regarded as threats to herself would be strengthened; while if it came to be an armament race between herself and all the other interested Powers she could not hope to gain from the enormous cost anything but a decreased proportion of strength. The present Government has distinctly curbed the tone of the Press comments and her new proposal for a uniform reduction of ships all round is one that may be discussed in a perfectly friendly and calm frame of mind.

The direct interest of Hong Kong is that the question of the status of our port will depend on the decision whether the old agreements shall be renewed, or some change made in the territorial provisions. Japan is at present just as much bound not to attack Hong Kong as we are bound not to attack her islands. In case of renewal the policy of finishing the Singapore Base and regarding Hong Kong as a mere advanced port of call will be continued. The instalments due to the Home Government for the purchase of the Dockyard will be resumed, and probably the garrison will be reduced. In the other event, if the non-fortified zone plan is abandoned, it will affect Hong Kong just in the same way as Manila and the Japanese Islands;—there will be stronger fortifications and a larger fleet on the station. Nobody will gain from the change.

HAMLET REVIEWED

THE desultory correspondence which has appeared in the local Press, giving the impressions of sundry of the audience at the University Hall last Saturday, may perhaps excuse so late a return to the subject; but the play is like one of the famous operas which one goes to see not for any novelty, but for the pleasure of comparison with recollections of other performances good, bad and indifferent. In some ways it is a keener pleasure than that of seeing something new, with no standard of comparison but one's own imagination of how the thing might have been done.

PRODUCTION

THE first thing is to heartily congratulate the Producer on an act of faith. What with the extremely exigent resources, the bad acoustics of the hall, and the fact that most of the actors were using a language not their own, the odds were heavily against success; yet there was no doubt of the success. There was plenty of what professional critics call "theatre"—which means that one had the feeling throughout that there was really something happening on the stage. To get this effect the players must know their lines, and must play as a team. Self-consciousness is the great danger. Some mention has been made of the outstanding performances of great actors; but that is absurd and unfair. I can remember a strolling company in a country town, what used to be called a "fit-up", which succeeded only in provoking uproarious laughter, and it is one of the paradoxes of the stage tragedy and farce, like great wit and madness, nearly are akin; how near appeared for an instant when Polonius was shot with a toy pistol and a percussion cap. As fells were on hand for the last scene there was no reason why a pass through the arras should not have been retained. The scenery was suitable, and far more effective than any variety that could have been shown with local resources and long waits for the alteration.

THE MINOR CHARACTERS

HAMLET stood out in the play as Shakespeare wrote it not only on the merits of the speeches, but partly because all the minor parts were subordinated; in fact one of the difficulties is to decide whether it is really worth while to try to make much of them. On this subject it may be apposite to recall the remarks of a very acute amateur critic who was a theatre fan for some sixty years.—Sir Frederick Pollock. He was able to compare not only all the English versions since the middle of the last century, but the French and German and American. First as to elocution. He tells us that Delaunay had practised all kinds of whispers, to find out what part of the Comedie Française could be reached by each, until he knew how to reach the back row. Elocution has nothing to do

CENTENARY AIR RACE TOPIC OF DAY COMPETITORS, MACHINES AND THE COST

"TOUGHEST THING ATTEMPTED"

(By Our Aviation Correspondent.)

WHEREVER two or three air-minded citizens are gathered to-day, there is one subject which is bound to come up during the course of the conversation—the great air race from England to Australia, scheduled to start from Mildenhall aerodrome near Newmarket, on Saturday next.

Although Hong Kong is some 1,000 miles off the route which the bird-men will follow, estimated in the generous measure of the Orient, they will pass "pretty close," to use the words of one local enthusiast. It is pretty close when one takes into consideration the fact that the majority of the competitors are flying planes in which they could leave Singapore after an early breakfast and be tiffing at the Peninsula Hotel shortly after noon.

One competitor has already been boasting that he will be in Singapore within 36 hours of leaving England! There is little doubt, however, aside from foolish exaggeration, that amazing times bid fair to be established. Mr. Royal Leonard, who is to be one of the pilots of Miss Cochran's Northrup monoplane, during a recent visit to Singapore to survey the route, is reported as saying that, given good weather, the race should prove one of the most thrilling events in the history of world aviation.

Asked what was his opinion about stimulus to flying in general, the answer was: "My own opinion is that the stimulus of this race is helping to advance the development of aviation by five years."

Tremendous Expenditure.
In the face of such statements as this, it is clearly seen that the

Hong Kong Personalities

MR. LOUIS H. GOURLEY

This is the eleventh of the exclusive "Sunday Herald" series of sketches of leading Colony residents by Mr. A. S. Kanya, the talented Hungarian artist.

MR. Louis H. Gourley, America's chief representative in Hong Kong, this year celebrated his "coming of age" in the United States Consular Service, for it is 21 years ago last July 1 that he stepped out of the teaching profession to a lowly desk that was one day to lead him to the post of one of 500 ranking guardians of American interests spread round the globe.

Many adventures have beset Mr. Gourley during those 21 years, but he has emerged unscathed from them all, learning from each that life in the Consular service is not all honey.

Chance really placed Mr. Gourley's feet on the first rungs of the ladder to his present post. After leaving the University of Illinois, with a B. A. degree, special honours in French, and Phi Beta Kappa, he became a professor at San Luis College, San Luis Potosi, Mexico, and it was then that he heard of a position in the Consulate at Vera Cruz, which he accepted in 1913 and retained during some exciting revolutionary times.

To fit himself further for a Consular career, Mr. Gourley returned to the United States in 1915 and studied International Law at Columbia University. He later went to the George Washington University, Washington, and emerged with a M. A. degree. Not yet satisfied, Mr. Gourley pursued the study of foreign languages, going to Paris to polish up his French. He is now a skilled linguist in French, German, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, Polish, Russian, Rumanian, Malay, and Dutch, and is now learning that most difficult of all languages, Cantonese.

TO-DAY'S QUOTATION

I owe all my success in life to having been always a quarter of an hour beforehand.—LORD NELSON.

HONG KONG AND THE NEW TERRITORIES. — No. 125.

THE season for walks and climbs in the Colony has come round once more with the advent of the cooler weather. On the afternoon of last Sunday, the 2.25 train took us to Sha-tin station where we walked back over Sha-tin Pass to Kowloon. The route is too well known to need description but for one who has not previously made this walk the early part can be confusing. After leaving the station cross the road and follow the bund to a stone foot bridge which crosses. Turn left after a house, immediately the other side of the Shing Mun river, and follow the path keeping to the left of the paddy fields at the other side of which is a walled village. Keep on in the same direction and cross a stream which descends in a rocky water course, the path now bifurcates, take the right branch which ascends and leads up the Sha-tin pass.

Very little of natural historical interest was noticed on the way up. Three Pied Wagtails and a party of the pure white Lesser Egrets were seen near the Shing Mun River and hawked at the top of the pass. This was probably a Kestrel but the light was too bad to be certain. We have noticed a Kestrel in the vicinity of the top of this pass on more than one previous occasion but Peregrine Falcons have also been identified near the Lion Rock so this bird may possibly have been this rarer falcon.

Strychnine
Two plants of especial interest were noticed during the descent to Kowloon. One was the rarer of the two local Strychnine plants namely Strychnos paniculata. This species has much smaller fruits than the S. angustiflora and each has but one seed to the two or three of the larger fruit.

Strychnos species are easy to recognise. The fruits are like little oranges but confusion with an orange is not possible because the leaves are arranged in opposite pairs on the branches, which is never the case in the Citrus family. The leaf is very distinctive; it possesses three well marked veins which run from the junction with the petiole; the two outer ones diverge and then approach the mid-vein near the tip of the leaf. Sometimes there is another pair of similar but less prominent veins in the tissue just within the margins of the leaf. These three characteristics of fruit, opposite pairs of leaves and venation of the leaf are quite sufficient for identification of the genus Strychnos. Needless to say the seeds in the fruits are very poisonous though, curiously enough, the pulp which surrounds them is not.

The other plant worthy of mention is Izora chinensis. This small shrub was present in abundance in full flower on the hillside above and below the lower three quarters of the path. The flowers are borne in terminal panicles and are orange, scarlet to scarlet in colour. This is undoubtedly one of the most beautiful of our local indigenous shrubs and fortunately is on the increase. It is strictly protected and the protection, that has now been given it for some years has resulted in a very great increase in the number of plants in the few localities where it may be found. We have never seen it growing wild on Hong Kong island and apart from the Kowloon Hills, from the Lion Rock to Customs Pass, we only know it from two or three localities where it is but scantily represented.

At the Sha-tin side of the pass near the summit were noticed several plants of the Bamboo orchid, Arundina chinensis, in flower. This orchid is at its best in August but flowers may be found until Christmas or later.

DISCOVERY OF AMERICA MARKED BY LOCAL BANQUET

HOME OF INVENTION AND DEMOCRACY

LATIN-AMERICAN CONSULS CELEBRATE

The value to the world of the discovery of the American continent by Christopher Columbus, was stressed by the Italian Consul-General, Cav. Uff. A. Bianconi, who presided at the banquet given by the Latin American Consuls at the Hong Kong Hotel, on Friday night, on the occasion of the 42nd anniversary of the discovery of America.

Sir William Shenton, who presided at the Consul's speech, described America as the "Home of Invention, and Democracy," and said that the discovery of the vast continent had given, new life to mankind.

Speeches in Spanish were made by the Consul for Cuba, Fr. Bonachea y Romero, and the Consul for Guatemala, Senor J. G. Gonzalez de Bernedo.

Among those present were members of the Consular body, His Excellency the G.O.C., Major-General O. C. Borrett, and Mrs. Borrett; Sir William Shenton and Miss Yvonne Shenton, Commodore Frank Elliott and Mrs. Elliott, Sir Shou-son Chow, Captain J. J. Abbott, A.D.C. to the G.O.C., and Paymaster-Commander F. R. Porter, Secretary to the Commodore.

Cav. Uff. A. Bianconi said: "It is on behalf of my colleagues representing the Latin American countries that I have to-night the honour of addressing to you their best thanks for your presence. We have heard enough of this banquet in these last few days and the rumour had reached our ears that several people wondered about the real meaning of the actual celebration."

"The banquet is put under the symbol of In Raza which is English means race and has led some people to believe that a new kind of competition was going to take place in Happy Valley where instead of the customary Chinese and Australian ponies, Latin American horses would be among the starters. The misunderstanding needed a good deal of explanation. I had to say that the race which is being celebrated is that new population which, while taking its sources from the joint efforts of the Latin people, has supplied the world with a new civilisation in North and South America."

"In the XIV and XV Century there was a great speculation in Europe as to the existence of a new continent whose size and products, besides being mentioned in old prophecies and traditions, were foreshadowed as the beginning of a new era in the entire world. A competition for the Blue Ribbon of those old days was started on the oceans and the sailors of Dieppe tried to reach the new continent through the northern way already followed by the Iceland and Norwegian fishermen, while the Portuguese and Spaniards, at the top of their political power, under the pressure of their religious zeal, left no stone unturned to support financially the tread toward the new continent."

Triumph For Italy
"It was the lot of an Italian to put his mind at the service of the political and religious might of Spain which seemed to enjoy the unique privilege of discovering a new country and giving birth to a new civilisation."

"The story of the colonisation of America has still to be made and deprived of all the prejudices which, thanks to the theories of the humanitarian XVIII century and to the narrow ideas of the stupid XIX century, seem to have obscured facts, ideas and men belonging to those times. When Cortez with 600 soldiers went to the conquest of the powerful empire of the Aztecs, when Almagro and Pizarro with a few infantry men and artillery took possession of the Inca Kingdom, there was no time for prayers, and the law of the war had its way no."

TATTOO PROMISES TO SHATTER ALL RECORDS THIS YEAR

FULL PROGRAMME ANNOUNCED

CHANGES IN PRICES AND START OF PRODUCTION

Extensive arrangements are being prepared for the Grand Military Searchlight Tattoo on November 1, 2, and 3, which will be held on an even larger scale than the previous display given in October, 1928. Only one European regiment took part that year, but this year there are three European battalions assisting.

In addition every military unit in the Colony will assist, and judging from the items on the programme, the display promises to be a first-class attraction which on no account should be missed.

H. E. the G.O.C., Major-General O. C. Borrett, C.B., C.M.G., C.B.E., D.S.O., will open the Tattoo on the first night; Commodore Frank Elliott, O.B.E., R.N., on the second night, and H.E. the Governor, Sir William Peel, K.C.M.G., K.B.E., on the third night.

Opening Hour Altered
The opening hour has been altered to 8.30 p.m., owing to the difficulty of getting the crowd away before the midnight hour, while the prices for the seating accommodation have also been changed. The 10 seats have been reduced to $7, and the other reserved seats are priced at $5, $3 and $2. Unreserved seats will be offered at $1.00 and 50 cents.

Members of every military unit stationed in the Colony are taking part and one of the main ideas of the Tattoo is to provide an opportunity to the public of seeing the various units of the Army performing their work under realistic conditions as possible.

Chinese Assist
The Chinese, who are always willing to give assistance, are preparing a very attractive programme of items, including Chinese fencing, gambling lions, and artistic dances; while the Indian Regiments are assisting with a full dress production of one of their native war dances.

Patience Should Be Character Mark

Where Many Miss A Great Deal In Life

Example Set By Christ

(By the Rev. J. N. Lewis Bryan.)

IN the present series of articles, on the marks which we should bear on our lives and characters, based upon the words of St. Paul, "I bear on my body the marks of the Lord Jesus," we have thought of Loyalty, and Self-sacrifice. To-day we come to Patience. As a matter of fact, all these marks are linked together. Loyalty is often a difficult thing and requires courage. Patience is often nothing less than courageous self-sacrifice.

Patience is one of the hallmarks of every great character. However courageous or skillful a man may be, if he has not the virtue of patience, there is something missing that nothing can replace. Whatever a man's ability may be with head or hand, without patience to back it up, there is always the chance of failure.

One of the greatest examples of patience was Christ Himself. There is not one single touch of impatience or fret or worry about His life. He moves through the pages of the Gospels with an absolute calmness, an unhurried patience. Time and time again, His disciples tried to hurry Him on a bit, but His reply was "Mine hour is not yet come." He went on patiently, tollingly, all the years of His ministry endeavouring to commit His teachings to their rather stupid minds. He laid it down as a motto for His followers that they were not to worry about to-morrow, but to be patient to-day and let to-morrow take care of itself when it comes.

Patience Needed To-day
Is not patience sadly needed to-day? We are a very impatient people. We live in an age of hurry and bustle. The slogan of our time is "Make it snappy." "Bright, brief and breezy." And it applies to religion too. People are wanting it served up to them in tabloid form, and just because we are so impatient, we miss a great deal of the joy and glory and value of life and religion.

Patience is not an English word, it comes from the Greek. It means one who is willing to suffer, one who does not take things easily, who is willing to manifest in his life a capacity for endurance, restraint and self-control. It has therefore many shades of meaning. One of them is just the ability to wait.

Self-Restraint Is Difficult
And is not that one of the hardest things in life? To hold ourselves back, until the right moment arrives, even though every nerve is throbbing with the desire to go ahead, to get it over, to see what lies around the next corner, to curb our rashness and exuberance, and school ourselves to wait. Many a battle has been lost because a commander has not had the ability to wait.

Let us run with patience the race that is set before us. Watch any long distance runner, how he holds himself back until the right moment, and then goes all out. Impatient batemen have thrown away many a match. In life and in games we have to wait for the right ball to come along.

When Patience Is Necessary
There are three cases in life when patience is necessary but very difficult in the presence of mysteries which we do not understand. Lots of people throw over religion because they do not understand all about it. They are baffled by so many seeming inequalities in life, the problems of pain and suffering and some of the doctrines laid down by the Church, which seem so out of touch with modern conditions. But if we throw over anything that we do not fully understand, life would soon be full of difficulties. Wireless and electricity would have to be scrapped, and many other things. We take them on trust, and try and learn something about them, and sooner or later we get enlightenment.

Tests Of Manhood
It is difficult too, to have patience when we are suffering under a sense of disappointment, when hopes are dashed, and expectation unfulfilled. But these things are a test of our manhood, and what it is worth, if we do not lose our heads, because things have not turned out as we would have liked.

It is difficult, too, when things are moving slowly, and we want them to go fast. People are walking and we want them to run. They are running and we want them to fly. But some of us can't hurry; and if God did not take a lot of pains over some of us who are slow and stupid, we would soon be in a mess. He is mighty patient with us, let us extend that virtue to other people.

The Programme
The following is the programme:—Salvo of Guns. Fanfare of Trumpets. Indian Kathak Dancing. (H. K. S. Brigade, R.A.) Physical Training Display. Chinese Display. Battle of Koorik Drift (S.W.N.) Torchlight Parade. Massed Bands (Overture, 1812). Lockness Monster. Military Fantasy (Battle of Waterloo). Massed Bands beat Tattoo. Display by Lam Cho Society. Drill-Drill. (1854 and 1934). GRAND FINALE.

MOTERING NOTES -

BIG CAR BOOM IN BRITAIN

Largely Due To New Tax Reduction

London. The total new registrations of private cars in May last were 22,221, as compared with 19,243 in May, 1933. An interesting fact is that there was a big increase in the 20-30 h.p. categories. In May last year 1,104 cars of between 20 and 30 h.p. were registered for the first time; in May, 1934, the number had risen to 1,731.

The rise in the sales of fairly big cars was chiefly due to the horsepower tax reduction which is to take effect on January 1st next.

It would be interesting to know to what extent this increasing popularity of cars with large engines is reflected by the sales of British vehicles. It was on the recommendation of British car makers that the change in taxation was agreed to by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and, presumably, they are feeling the good effects of it.

LARGE TYRES FEATURE OF NEW CARS

If half what I hear concerning 1935 models is true, we are going to have very much more comfortable touring than has been the case hitherto, especially those of us who use smallish cars (writes Charles Wynn in "The Autocar.")

I believe that one of the high spots of 1935 small cars will be the fitting of much larger tyres than has until now been the case. Singers made a good start with the big tyres on their streamlined 11 h.p. car. Bigger tyres and wider bodies are what we all want.

BETTER TELEGRAM DELIVERY

Motor Cycles Prove Successful

LONDON EXPERIMENTS

London. So successful has been the motor cycle delivery of telegrams that the Post Office authorities have decided to extend the service in both urban and rural districts. The service has been made for motor cycles to be used throughout the outer ring of the Metropolis.

Already there are nearly 200 motor cycles in use for this work, quite apart from the 3,700 motor cycles that the Post Office has for general postal and engineering work.

Providing telegraphic messenger boys with motor cycles has been practised in Ireland for some considerable time, but it was only last year that the scheme was adopted experimentally in England.

That it has proved a success and is to be greatly extended is pleasing, because it tends to stress once again the utility and safety of the modern motor cycle.

"Heroin pills are outdoing opium this season," said Revenue Officer Humphreys when prosecuting Liu Po-lan, a 34-year-old unemployed, for having in his possession, at No. 113 Fuk Wing Street ground floor, 88,000 pink pills. Accused was charged before, Mr. E. I. Wynne Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy, yesterday morning.

R. O. Humphreys stated that he conducted a raid the above address early on the morning of October 11, and found the defendant in a small cubicle adjoining the kitchen. All over the floor were newspaper parcels containing the pills. When analysed, it was found that the pills contained morphine.

Defendant was formerly a policeman, and had resigned from the force six years ago on his own accord. R. O. Humphreys stated that the pills were from the north and were not the usual local pills. The maximum fine of $2,500, in default six months' hard labour, was imposed.

CORRESPONDENCE.

"HAMLET" AT THE UNIVERSITY

(To the Editor, the "Sunday Herald.") Sir.—When I read H.S.W.'s account of the production of "Hamlet" by the Hong Kong University Arts Association last week, I could not help feeling that H.S.W. had committed some glaring blunders, which I deem it my duty to point out to the reading public.

Allow me to quote from his account: "Shakespeare himself doubtless dressed his players in the costume of the period; but the speech he employed was the speech of the period too." Now if "the period" means the Elizabethan period, I would like to ask him: Did the Elizabethans in the 16th Century speak exactly like the characters in "Hamlet"? And if "the period" means the period when the real Danish Prince lived, I would like to ask him: Did the Danes in Hamlet's time speak like the characters in "Hamlet"? The answer in both cases is in the negative. And one thing we are definitely sure of is that the Danes certainly did not speak English!

Let me quote again: "Speech changes with dress and our language to-day is as modern as our dress." H.S.W. seems to infer from this that what the producer should have done was to have re-written "Hamlet" in modern English. May I remind him that the love, the study and appreciation of Shakespeare lies at the very root of the production. Shakespeare's dramas cannot be re-worded or rendered in modern English. They should be read, studied, and acted in their original form, otherwise they lose their true, intrinsic value. Moreover, how ridiculous it will be to hear Hamlet calling Ophelia: "Darling, you are swell!" or "Honey, let's go places."

"Suffice it to say," continues H.S.W., "that where Barry Jackson and his splendid company failed to convince, one could hardly expect local amateurs to be more successful." Here H.S.W. is very illogical. Barry Jackson might have failed to convince, but that is no reason why the Arts Association should do no better. The amateurs with their new talents, new ideas, and new technique, may even excel Barry Jackson.

Allow me to quote further: "...even though the majority of the audience failed to see eye to eye with him (the producer)" How did H.S.W. know that the majority thought as he thought? He might have sounded the opinions of a few people, but that few cannot possibly be the majority. H.S.W. has made too rash and sweeping a statement, characteristic of a half-baked critic.

better and no worse than what we have witnessed in more recent times.

"The Catholic Church came in its turn, and contributed a new page to the history of the civilisation of the world thanks to which the protection of the indigenous people could be secured and the happy mixture of the conquering and the best elements of the heirs of the antique civilisation of America took place. Can we wonder now if in the middle of such a heavy task several mistakes have been made and if the progress of the new world has been paid with a dearly earned experience which has benefited the world at large?

Benefit To World

"We are now able to understand some errors of the financial policy of the King of Castile, of Portugal and also of England in the XVI century as after the post war experience we entertain a deep faith in the gold metal whose hoarding appears as the only real form of wealth. Of course, when I speak of the world, I don't mean the island of Hong Kong where a great belief in silver seems to give rise to the most rosy hopes of the happy end of the economic crisis.

"Anyway, to say it in plain words, the discovery and colonisation of America has been a good business for everybody except for Spain. That noble country which survives every crisis with a renewed energy has seen its best blood drained by the gigantic efforts for the creation of a new race. Tantae molis erat Romanam condere gentem.

"While America was shaping its interior and external frame, Spain's political power was falling into internal decadence and international costly wars. Nobody, however, could foresee how the history of Europe would have developed if Spain had not devoted its best armaments and treasures to American affairs. May be the growing powers of the northern countries of Europe would have found stronger resistance and the old Catholic unity would have restored in Europe three centuries before Napoleon could conceive and partly fulfil the political unification.

"But it will remain to the everlasting credit of Spain to have supplied Europe with a new activity for the beginning of banks and have given the start to the financial speculation which seems to have created the later wealth of the Dutch and Anglo-Saxon countries.

Not A "Peak Party"

"Before finishing I owe an apology to all of you for the unwarranted length of my speech. I hope no complaint will reach me from the local press among which a good deal of speculation seems to have arisen on account of any unjustifiable noise likely to be engendered by a Latin American Banquet.

"They may rest assured that no police protection will be needed to protect their dreams of perpetual peace, as it is a widely known fact

AMAZING SERIES OF FRAUDS

On (x) charge Inspector Murphy said that on August 31, accused hired a taxi, which was driven by Sun Ka-yuen, to drive him to the Tai Sung firm, where he obtained the bracelets by saying that he was an employee of a Japanese firm in the Colony and that his master wanted to buy the bracelets. The two foks accompanied him to the said Japanese firm, but defendant slipped out of the back way. He then ordered the taxi driver to drive him to the Sincere Company where he alighted and told the driver to wait for him. He did not return. The driver was said to have waited for three hours.

After a long hearing on (x) charge accused was convicted. The case was adjourned until Monday afternoon for the hearing of the remaining charges.

And now let me express the hope that this will not be our last dinner and that the foreign Consuls will be able to add the contribution of their knowledge and experience to the social life of this most hospitable Colony.

SPINSTER'S INERTIA IN BRIBE CASE

No Wish To Prosecute
Constable

MR. WONG KWONG-TIN
AS WITNESS

An alleged attempt to obtain a bribe from a passenger at the Hong Kong and Canton Wharf was revealed at the Central Magistracy yesterday morning, before Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen, when Ng Yum, a Chinese constable, was charged.

Lam Po-chi, a spinster, whom an officer was alleged to have asked for $13, stated in the witness box that someone asked her for the money so that she could board the ship without having her luggage searched. Then, she said, a gentleman, who overheard the constable, interfered, but she could not identify either the officer or the gentleman in question. Mr. Wong Kwong-tin, Chairman of the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce, who was said to be the gentleman in question, was then produced, but complainant could not recognise him.

Mr. G. K. Hall-Bruton, appearing for Ng Yum, strongly denied the charge and cross-examined the witness, who said that she came to the Court only because she was called to, and that she did not wish to prosecute, the case was dismissed.

BANISHED SEAMAN RETURNS

Blames Ship's Schedule
For Presence Here

For being found on a motor lorry, No. 1691, coming from the New Territories, with 63 tacks of raw opium tied round his waist, Young Sang, a 28-year-old seaman off the Jardine steamer Mau Sang, was fined $1,000, in default six months' hard labour, by Mr. E. I. Wynne Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday morning.

After enquiries had been made it was found that he was banished in February this year for a period of 10 years, and so an additional charge of returning from banishment without an authorised permit was made. To this charge defendant pleaded that it was not his fault he was in the Colony, as the boat on which he worked had brought him here.

On the latter charge he was sentenced to 12 months' imprisonment.

THE PASSING HOUR

with shouting; and it is a very useful art. Sir Frederick told Mounet-Sully that he was "the only Hamlet I have seen who fully brought out the capital point. Hamlet was not only Prince of Denmark, but a great gentleman and a person not to be trifled with. That impression must be given on Hamlet's first entrance, and it must at once be clear that the King is afraid of him. If Hamlet had been, as some actors have made him, a scholar and artist rather bored by being a prince, Claudius would already have thrown him out of window or otherwise disposed of him, and the play would never begin." Sir Frederick adds "once I saw Hamlet played by an English actor, an eminent one too, in a fashion wholly lacking dignity, which made me think that a disappointed deacon of some small provincial chapel had strayed into Denmark by mistake." "If anything is clear among the problems of the play, it is that Hamlet disguises his real emotions by putting on a wilfully unmeasured extravagance even when he is serious." That is really the key to the part, and a stiff key to use.

OPHELIA AND POLONIUS

"REICHEMBERG," Sir Frederick tells us, "was the incomparable ingenu, delightful in all parts. It is true she did not make much of Ophelia; but I have never known any actress who did. The explanation I believe is that there is really very little to be made of it. Ophelia has no character when she is sane, and not much when she is mad." Of Polonius he says "he is not a dotard, still less a pantaloon, his age may be between fifty and sixty, but at best

CENTENARY AIR RACE TOPIC OF DAY

Six Compulsory Stops
The actual course to be covered by the competitors will be over 11,000 miles, there being six compulsory stops as follows:

London to Baghdad 2,540 miles
Baghdad to Allahabad 2,390
Allahabad to Singapore 2,210
Singapore to Darwin 2,080
Darwin to Charleville 1,380
Charleville to Melbourne 787

Total 11,297 miles
Every machine must carry a certificate of airworthiness. This ensures that the plane shall not be overloaded with petrol and oil—risks that have been taken before in the case of long-distance flights.

Colonel Fitzmaurice, the Irish airman, has described his race as the toughest thing which man and machine have ever been called on to attempt, and it is certain that none but first-class pilot could even venture the journey with a hope of success.

U. S. Leads Entries
The precise number of entries is at present obscure, but it is believed that no more than 25 of the original 64 entries will participate. America, with 11 representatives, headed the list when the entry deadline fell at noon on June 1, but owing to the high cost, a number of them dropped out. These included Clyde Pangborne, Roscoe Turner, Wiley Post, Miss Ruth Nicholls and Miss Jacquelline Cochran, while the Douglas aviation concern, which entered Harold Gatty has scratched. Jimmy Weddell, speed ace, who was also entered, was killed in a crash recently at Patterson, Louisiana, while Capt. Kingsford Smith will also be an absentee.

Denmark has entered Mr. Michael Hansen, flying instructor at Kastrup, who will use a single-engine English machine of 120 h.p. which can fly non-stop for 84 hours at a speed of 115 m.p.h. Mr. Hansen believes that he can complete the trip in 250 hours.

Colonel Fitzmaurice, the famous Irish airman, who is representing the Irish Sweepstake organisation, has selected an American machine, a Bellanca Special, with a range of 3,000 miles. He believes that the design will cause a sensation in the aviation world.

France Offers Prize
France has not entered an official plane, but a special award of 250,000 francs has been offered to the first French competitor to finish in the race in order to encourage private initiative.

Australia and Great Britain originally had eight entries each, while Holland and France had four each. An entry has also been received from Sweden.

Great Britain's hopes appear to be centred upon Captain Broad, the De Havilland Company's test pilot, the Mollison's, C.W.A. Scott and T. Campbell.

FUGITIVE JUMPS INTO NULLAH

Found Unconscious By Policeman

Hau San, a 35-year-old unemployed, was sentenced to six weeks' hard labour by Mr. E. I. Wynne Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday morning for stealing three chickens on October 9 from Kong Tung, a 51-year-old farmer, living in an unnumbered hut in Chuk Yuen Village.

It was stated that the defendant was seen with the chickens in his possession by a constable and on seeing the constable approach ran away and threw the chickens into a bush. The constable followed and defendant jumped into a nullah.

He was removed from the nullah in an unconscious state and was taken to the Kowloon Hospital. There was only a few inches of water in the nullah.

He is an ordinary courtier with no brains of his own. His advice to Laertes is only a neat expression of the maxims current in polite society of the Renaissance, and to be found in any one of a dozen Italian books. It is obviously unjust to criticise the supporting cast for not getting more out of a part than the dramatist intended to put into it.

CRUELTY TO BIRDSEuropean Lady Brings Case To Notice

Arrested at the instance of Mrs. F. Wright, of No. 20, second floor, Luna Building, Lai Leung, unemployed, was yesterday morning charged before Mr. W. M. Thomson at the Central Magistracy, with cruelty to more than 400 birds. Mrs. Wright, who saw Lai carry the birds in two bags, summoned Sergeant Reidy to the Star Ferry Wharf, where it was found that all the birds were dead except eight of them in one bag. A fine of $10, in default 15 days' hard labour was imposed.

VICE-CONSUL AT VERA CRUZ

Upon the successful completion of his Consular examination in 1916, Mr. Gourley returned to Vera Cruz, not as a clerk, but this time as a Vice-Consul, in which capacity he remained for three years until being transferred to Warsaw, Poland. Post-war confusion made his introduction to European service interesting. While there the Polish-Russian Bolshevik clashes forced the Polish Government, and the American Consulate, with it, to move to Graudenz, and then to Posen, when Graudenz was threatened.

It was during his stay in Poland that Mr. Gourley was promoted through the three grades of Vice-Consul to that of Consul and became a foreign service officer under the 1924 Act, which combined the Consular and Diplomatic Departments into the present Foreign Service.

The next transfer, to Laurence Marques, in Portuguese East Africa, on the Indian Ocean, was a welcome one to Mr. Gourley, for during his vacations he travelled in 27 European countries and several in the Near East. He moved to a second African post, at Port Elizabeth, South Africa, in 1926, and stayed there until the following year.

After a vacation of several months in the United States and Brazil, Mr. Gourley was detailed to work with the International Radio Conference at Washington, in 1927.

HIS SECOND REVOLUTION
The next year he continued his world tour with a post in the coffee capital, San Paulo, Brazil. From this centre of 1,000,000 inhabitants, with its modern skyscrapers, Mr. Gourley toured extensively in South America, and it was here that he witnessed his second revolution. He was in San Paulo when the 1930 uprising took place in Brazil, and was there when the rebels entered the city under Vargas. The next year took him back to the United States for a vacation in connection with trade work.

His next Consulship brought him to the Far East, via the Philippines, Japan, and China to Medan, on the island of Sumatra in the Dutch East Indies, and so to Hong Kong, last Autumn.

Fond of all kinds of sports, Mr. Gourley is particularly keen on rowing and swimming, but travel is his greatest interest in life. At the end of this year Mr. Gourley plans to utilise his vacation by a trip to Java.

THE INDIAN QUESTIONCHAMBERLAIN RIDICULES WHITE PAPER DISCUSSION*NEW SITUATION MAY ARISE*Danger Of Advent Of Socialist Govt.*BRIEF MENTION OF ARMS

London, Yesterday. Reference to last week's India discussion at the Conservative Conference at Bristol was made by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, in a speech to Conservatives at Edgbaston, Birmingham, last night.

He said that it must be remembered that it was quite possible that the final conclusions on India would be so different from those contained in the White Paper that a new situation would arise. It would, therefore, be premature and absurd to discuss a White Paper when they did not know whether it was going to be a real foundation for final proposals.

He added that Conservatives should recollect that if, in consequence of differences in the Party, the Socialists were allowed to come in, Mr. George Lansbury had stated that they would immediately call a constituent assembly in India and hand over to that body the formation of a constitution for India.

Those who talk about the Government's proposals constituting the surrender of India, should recollect that the greatest danger of surrender lies not in any Government proposals, but in the possible advent of the power of a Socialist Government.

GREATEST DANGER
Referring to the Government's armaments programme, Mr. Chamberlain said that he hoped that the new expenditure involved would not be great in any one year, as to cripple Britain's resources. He added that Great Britain would not relax her efforts to prevent a general building up of the level of armaments.—Reuter.

MARSHAL CHIANG'S GREAT WELCOMESianfu Agog With Excitement

Sianfu, Yesterday. Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, Madame Chiang, and General Chang Hsueh-liang, who are making a tour of inspection in Shensi Province, arrived yesterday afternoon and were given a very warm welcome by a huge crowd of citizens, troops, and school children. The city was besieged and agog with excitement. The party are remaining for two or three days.—Reuter.

The report that M. Bogomoloff is seeing Japanese Government officials is denied by officials at the Soviet Embassy.—Reuter.

attack, being well backed up by their halves, Brookes (who played a hard clean game throughout), Gough and Parker. An amusing incident occurred during this spell. T. Pilo passed to Johnston, who lost sight of the ball when situated about 10 yards out, with an "impossible to miss" chance of opening the scoring. Poor Johnston looked everywhere, except between his feet, from whence Eastman hooked the ball clear! A lucky break for Kowloon. Shortly after this, however, Johnston made up for his previous errors, with a splendid shot from close-in, after Stephens had beaten three men and unselfishly passed to the centre-forward. Cord had no possible chance to save.

From the kick-off, Kowloon went to pieces, and apart from a few spasmodic breakaways by their ingemen, were hemmed in their half for practically the remainder of the game.

A little more steadiness by the defence inside men, and they would have increased the score, as chance after chance came their way from the Green and T. Pilo.

At this stage, the Police half backs were playing really well, and in a melee, Stephens scored, but the play was disallowed by the referee, who blew for off-side against T. Pilo.

breakaway on the left saw Koon obtain the equaliser. D. Kn centred to V. White, who lobbed rather than shot, the ball into the net.

BODERERS FAIL TO BEAT CHINESE IN LAST MINUTES

Dejected Side Show Up Well

SOUTH CHINA DISAPPOINT

At Coline Hill yesterday, South China "B" and the Borderers scored six goals in a mediocre game.

The standard of the football was never really good, although there was some excuse for the Borderers. In the team originally selected, there were no fewer than three changes. Smith, the regular goalkeeper, was admitted to hospital on Friday night, and Trutt was brought in. While playing as well as could be expected, Trutt made his first appearance in league football yesterday—he could not be compared with Smith. Another absentee was Morris, the second team player who had been selected to take Hazlewood's position at inside-right until the latter is fit. Morris is on the sick list, and Morrison was moved up from full-back. Duncan was not fit enough to play, and Smith came in on the left wing. Smith also is a player who has made only one appearance in league football.

South China fielded the team as selected, but they were much below their usual form.

There was far too much wild kicking by both teams, and it was some time before either side settled down. The short passing game so favoured by the Chinese was hardly exploited for some unknown reason, the ball being swung from wing to wing.

Podmore was the hero of the Borderers team, and was still going as strong as ever when the final whistle blew. The defence, on the whole, was good. Herbert, who came in at left-back in place of Morrison, played a sterling game, and was often the one stumbling block between the Chinese and goal. Mullane gave his usual cool display—there are few things that will upset the Borderers captain.

The other halves, Davies and Underwood, had their hands full with the diminutive Chinese wingers, but gave little away. The forwards showed one weak link, and that was the left winger. Morrison was not a huge success as a forward but was "responsible" for presenting Jones with a goal.

Chinese Forwards Fail

The Chinese forwards were not up to their usual form, and were really somewhat lucky to get a division of the points. Tsang King Ki was a brilliant opportunist, and was well supported by Young Shui Yick on the right wing. Cheuk Shek Kam was also clever, but there was

CLUB TWICE HOLD LEAD BUT ATHLETIC SHARE FOUR GOALS

Temper Ruffled In Keen Struggle

POTE-HUNT SUPREME

Unpleasant incidents during the last quarter of an hour of play marred an otherwise excellent match between the Club and the Athletic yesterday at the Valley when the teams shared four goals.

The score was a true indication of the run of play. The game was fast and clean up to the closing stages when tempers became somewhat frayed, the referee continually "blowing up" for infringements; the Athletic were by no means guiltless, though the Club players were the prime offenders.

The Athletic missed a goal in the first moment of play. From the kick-off the ball went to Fung King-yu, who took it down the wing before centering perfectly to Ho Kar-keung. Ho, with an open goal in front of him, passed to Au Ping-ming, who was robbed by Pote-Hunt. Howe received the ball and ran down the middle to pass to Drown almost on the goal-line, and the latter had no difficulty in scoring the first goal of the game after three minutes' play.

Howe played a very good game at centre forward, but he missed a goal soon after the commencement. Fowler had taken the ball down his wing, cut in, and passed to Howe who had a wonderful opportunity, but lost his balance and shot wide.

Just before half time Au Ping-ming equalised for the Athletic, he received the ball from the wing with his back to the Club's goal, pivoted, and crashed the ball past Rodger.

E. Strange, playing his first game of the season, missed a glorious opportunity when he shot wide from about 6 yards range.

The closing stages of the first half were anxious moments for Rodger, but he saved brilliantly.

The Athletic initiated a mass attack movement at the opening of the second half, and Rodger was forced to concede a corner. Rodger let out-of-his-goal-to-punch the corner kick clear, but Ho Kar-keung met the ball near the penalty spot and sent in a fast "first-timer" netwards, only to see Duncan dash across and save an almost certain goal by heading clear. Pote-Hunt saved his side a few moments later when he raced Young Kam Po for the ball to send it high over his own goal for a corner—a very clever move which brought applause from the spectators. From the corner kick Pote-Hunt received the ball and took it down the field before sending it out to Baldwin who caused Sui to dive for the ball and push it round the post for a corner.

Fowler put the Club ahead a few moments later when he gave Sui no chance with a "daisy cutter" from not that usual understanding between them, and there were few really good movements. There were, however, many good individual efforts.

Lin Tak Po was outstanding in the intermediate line, and fed his forwards with accurate passes, but unfortunately little was made of them.

The Borderers opened the scoring through Jones, following a free kick for a handball offence. Podmore put the ball well into the goalmouth, and Jones hooked it past Lee. A few minutes later the same player put the Borderers further ahead after he and Smith had taken the ball well up the field with one of the few really good moves.

Cheuk Shek-kam reduced the deficit with a fast shot which gave Trutt no chance, the ball striking the foot of the upright and glancing off into the net. Shortly before the interval Lai Shui-wing scored the equaliser with an unstoppable shot.

Midway through the second period, Tsang King-ki obtained possession near the halfway line, and raced through on his own to end up with the best goal of the match.

Mullane then changed places with Morrison, and the move proved valuable, for within a couple of minutes, Jones had completed his hat-trick and equalised for the Borderers following a pass from Mullane. Both teams went all out for the decider, but the Borderers gradually secured the upper hand, and did everything but score.

20 yards. The Club became very aggressive at this stage, and tempers began to become ruffled.

Amusing Incident

An amusing incident occurred when Ho Chor Yui picked the ball up thinking it had gone out of play, and a kick was awarded against him for handling. The Athletic equalised about ten minutes from time. They were pressing very hard, and the Club's goal was packed with defenders. In a melee Ho Kar-keung used his head to advantage and put the equalising goal past Syd Strange who was standing on the goal line.

Ernie Strange and Duncan did not impress very much in their initial appearance this season, Duncan played a moderately good game, but Strange was not up to his last season's form. Howe played a good game but not as well as he did in his last two matches, but Pote-Hunt confirmed the general opinion that he is one of the finest centre-halves in local football. He played a good, hard, clean game, and was one of the few players who did not get ruffled, he initiated some fine movements and his forwards played up to him too, but the Athletic defence offered a stern opposition. Wong Sik-ling and Mak Sui-hon played excellently and did much to keep the Club out. Lai Kwok-chin played a good game at centre-half, but he was not up to Pote-Hunt's standard. The stars of the Athletic were the wing men, Li Hung-ching, Au Ping-ming, and Fung King-yu.

Second Division

EAST LANCES WIN 8-0

Young Indians Fare Very Poorly

The East Lances scored a decisive victory over the Young Indians by 8 goals to 1.

From the opening of the match they took up the offensive and it was only the good work of Omar in goal that prevented them scoring in the early stages.

Griffin often came near to scoring, but in spite of constant pressure, the Lances could not get the ball into the net. Finally, Ridings netted the ball from a scramble, and from that point the game resolved itself into a series of shots at Omar by the military forwards. Griffin, Bettin and Thompson added goals in quick succession.

The Indians were awarded a penalty but Rumlaha failed to convert and at half time the East Lances were leading by four clear goals.

Resuming the game the East Lances immediately took up the attack and Griffin scored the fifth goal from a very difficult angle. At this stage Thorpe, Griffin and Swan were playing well, and with Thompson serving them with abundant passes, they overran the Indian defence.

From a breakaway, Yussuff got through and beat Harmsworth as he dashed out of goal to clear, scoring the Indians' solitary goal. Play again centred around the Indian goal and with an excellently placed shot Griffin added the sixth goal. A few moments later Thorpe increased the lead and a minute later scored again with shot that left Omar helpless to give the East Lances their eighth goal.

The Borderers opened the scoring through Jones, following a free kick for a handball offence. Podmore put the ball well into the goalmouth, and Jones hooked it past Lee. A few minutes later the same player put the Borderers further ahead after he and Smith had taken the ball well up the field with one of the few really good moves.

Cheuk Shek-kam reduced the deficit with a fast shot which gave Trutt no chance, the ball striking the foot of the upright and glancing off into the net. Shortly before the interval Lai Shui-wing scored the equaliser with an unstoppable shot.

LINCOLNS LAST

Navy Beaten In The Second Half

At Caroline Hill the Lincolns second string defeated the Navy Juniors by 5 goals to 3.

McGuire was given a trial at centre-half, Chamberlain being unable to play, and the Navy pivot was the mainstay of the team. He was well supported on his left by Bright, and by Chambers on the opposite side.

McGuinness and Setters proved too tricky for the Navy defence, as did Evans. Toynce gave a good display on the left, and is one of the few wingers who works hard for the ball, instead of waiting until it comes along.

Waldry kept the team together well, and in addition scored a beautiful goal, smashing the ball home from 40 yards. Maughan again gave a good display at right half, tackling very well and never wasting a pass. This youngster should be assured of a place in the senior team in the near future. The backs were safe, while Taylor always appeared confident.

The Lincolns were leading by 3 goals to 2 at the interval, goals having been scored by Glass (2) for the Navy, and by Setters and Evans (2) for the Lincolns.

The second period saw the soldiers gradually gain the upper hand. Waldry and Setters adding further goals, while Golding netted for the Navy.

CLUB ROUTED

Athletic Pile On The Goals

The Club were easily trounced yesterday at the Valley replying once to the Athletic's five goals.

The Club forward line was greatly disorganised; there seemed to be no understanding whatsoever between them. Fisher, on the right wing, was the only player worth his salt—he played a very hard game—the remainder of the forwards were very weak.

Goldman at centre was practically a passenger, he could do nothing, and missed chance after chance.

Farrow missed an open goal soon after the game started: Fisher ran in and shot across the goalmouth. Li Kwok-ki dived for the ball but missed, and, whilst he was prostrate, Farrow, with an open goal at two yards distance, shot wide.

Payne has improved considerably in goal, but he has still a lot to learn.

The first goal was scored after 12 minutes, Au Kim-fong netting. The shot was by no means difficult and Payne should have held it.

The Athletic scored their second goal after 20 minutes through Chan Chung-yui, who took a neat pass from Chow Yim-cheung to give Payne no earthly chance.

Four minutes later the third goal was added, Chan Chung-yui hit the bar with a fine shot and Cheung Moon-wing net the ball on the rebound to direct it past Payne. Just on half-time Chan Chung-yui added the fourth goal when he received the ball from Cheung Moon-wing.

Binnie at right back for the Club played a great game, but the Athletic forwards were too good for him, particularly the very fast wing men who played rings round the Club's defence.

The Athletic scored their fifth goal through Chan Chung-yui, Payne got his hands to it, but failed to hold it and the ball went over his head into the net. Farrow scored the Club's only goal when he received a pass when unmarked, and had no difficulty in putting the ball past Li Kwok Ki.

EASTERN UNLUCKY

Lose Back And Then Drop Three Goals

A scrappy game was seen in the Happy Valley where the Artillery defeated the Eastern by 5 goals to 2.

It was only in the last 15 minutes, after Lai Tin Choi left the field through an injury, that the Artillery pilled on three more goals to ensure victory.

The Artillery opened the scoring with a goal by Morton, but the same player a little later failed to convert a penalty.

Eastern drew level when Leo Bing Fong scored from a penalty after having missed one earlier.

Just before the interval the Artillery regained the lead through Butterfield.

For a long time after the interval play was confined chiefly to midfield, but Fung Choi Po scored a fine goal after a solo run up the field, thus equalising the score.

Lai Tin Choi left the field shortly after and with only 10 men Eastern were unable to hold out against the persistent attack, and Morton (penalty) and Fisher (2) added goals for the Gunners.

ENGINEERS WIN

After Being Goal Down At Interval

Blake of the University was well watched by the opposing defence and had little scope to show his ability. The outstanding man on the field appeared to be Howlett. He scored two really good goals.

In the opening minute of the game the Engineers forced a corner from which a good goal was headed in by Howlett. The University however soon drew level. Blake took the ball down the wing and passed to Goon who had an easy task to place the ball in the net from short range.

The University took the lead through a neat movement which saw Young net with a fast drive.

After the interval the Engineers assumed the mastery and drew level through a good goal scored by Howlett, and in the closing minutes Creagh registered the winning goal with a hard drive from the wing.

BLACK PONY LOST ON KOWLOON HILLS

Adventures Of Five Holiday-Makers

Dying Mafoo Comedy At Riding Camp

Cow And Calf Hold Party Up On Narrow Mountain Path

(By A. N. B.)

IN the Kowloon Riding Club one evening, five of us suddenly discovered that we had four or five days' holiday due to us, and had made no arrangements concerning their disposal. A complete change was indicated. How to do it? Four or five days is much too short for a sea trip. This only left Hong Kong and the New Territories as our playground. Cabarets and cinemas are no change. We must go somewhere where there are no papers, no telephones and, dare we say it? no women. Obviously, this left one thing only — a camp, and why not take the ponies too? Therefore, a Riding Camp.

Suitable arrangements having been made with Colonel Kosik of the St. George's Riding Academy, we saddled our ponies and set off for Shatin at 6 a.m. on Monday. We cut the cards for the duty of baggage—Bertie was unlucky. We led his pony, while he accompanied the lorry, boy, mafoos, and supplies to our destination, somewhere in Shatin Valley.

Up past the reservoir, and over the brow of the hill, and we were able to see that, while things were moving in our camp, the tent was flat and no smoke heralded a well-earned breakfast. We forgave Bertie when we found that he had only one tent peg out of six, and that he had climbed the hill four times, giving instructions to the coolies.

The ponies—safely—tethered, groomed, and fed. Joe and Nick bravely tackled the tent problem, losing much skin in the effort, while the other three showed the boy the intricacies of camp cooking. Bob may know something about fires, but he has much to learn with regard to the age of eggs.

100 Yards Of Slush

Next job—to find a cool stream and park the bottles and tins. This was fairly easy, except that 100 yards of slush had to be waded through. We soon got used to that, however.

Before 10 we were in the saddle again, and, picking our way carefully along narrow paths between paddy fields, and crossing brooks etc. The ponies were very nervous and obviously unused to the work. Many dismountings were made and much coaxing used, but we made our objective, Shatin Cove, after an hour or so.

We had ten at a picturesque joss-house, and found the villagers most interested in us and very hospitable. To hear our sturdy little China ponies described as racing thoroughbreds was most gratifying. A gallop across the soft sand led us to the main road near Shatin Railway Station, and a two-mile walk along the road brought us back to "our turning," which actually is a very steep hill crossed by many culverts and ending in a series of shallow, but swiftly moving, streams. It was extremely interesting to note how the ponies objected to this path on the first day, and treated it as nothing before we left camp.

Back in the camp, we found the Colonel superintending things. He had walked all the way from Kowloon City, over Lion Rock, right into our camp; at midday too, stout follow! Thank goodness the bottles were cool by now! However, horses first and drink second is our motto. Later, all was beautifully quiet and restful, until the Colonel suggested letting the ponies loose to graze on their own. I still believe it is a good idea with some ponies, but not others. We hadn't finished letting them free before "Starlight" was seen half-way up "our turning," and stepping it out too! The mafoo and boy were dispatched to do their best, while Joe, Bob, and Nick made themselves ready for a good hike. After eight hours in the saddle too and getting up at 5 a.m. it was now dark, and the moon just showing, an ideal night—for sitting in camp.

Rare Experience

If you have never tramped the New Territories, looking for a black pony on a dark night, with a hand torch, you have missed an experience! It was four miles to Shatin Station, where we picked up the first clue—and isn't lemonade good! A polite message sent by coolie to the Police Station produced "Starlight," not quite so energetic as usual, and ready to be led home. We took it in turn to ride bareback up hill and down.

You may not believe it, but we did not get any sympathy from the others when we returned. They had already phoned Shatin Police Station though the kindness of the C. L. & P. Co's Sub-station caretaker, and discovered the wanderer's whereabouts. They rudely suggested that we had had dinner at the Police Station, and got a car back.

Their discovery effectually ruined a very good story which the three of us had concocted. And did we sleep? Mosquitoes were kept at bay by burning Chinese incense; and, barring the return of "Pasha" from the grazing fields asking to be tethered, nothing further happened until dawn.

WITH relief we saw "Starlight" and "Pasha" still safely tethered. Now to get the other three! Grand Duke was simple, and was rewarded for his sense with a big ration of oats and a grooming. "Utopian," we could see, but "Flywheel" had disappeared!

Joe, Bob and Nick, therefore, heroes of the "Starlight" episode, and thus with a reputation to maintain, arrayed in pyjama trousers and riding boots, took on the job of rounding up and retrieving the lost.

"Utopian" is a good pony—few better—and if he would only jump when ridden, as he did to evade capture, he would be No. 1 at Fanling at any time.

The correct procedure for catching a straying pony, so we have been told, is to approach it carefully with a handful of grass and, when he dodges, to stand still until he stops, and approach carefully again. "Utopian," however, had been fed on luscious grass all night, an unusual pleasure for him, and was not to be caught so easily. Cornering him after three quarters of an hour's hard work, we now had the pleasure of a kicking exhibition; but we got our horse and sent him home with Joe.

Bob and Nick trailed all over the hills in a fruitless search for "Flywheel," who incidentally was not retrieved until the next afternoon. Information was given by a villager, and Bertie climbed nearly to the top of Lion Rock to bring the wanderer back to the fold, none the worse for his outing.

In A Monastery Garden

In the afternoon we rode over to the Tao Pong Shan Monastery, getting marvellous views from the top of the hill over Shatin Valley. The arrival of four ponies with respectable-looking riders, (no shaving allowed in camp), caused quite a stir in the quiet of the Monastery garden, but we were soon receiving pressing invitations to tea with the ever-hospitable Principal, and only our untidiness prevented our accepting, but we were very grateful for the water.

Curiously enough, our ponies were restless the whole of the time, and "Utopian" actually pulled away from an iron girder to which he was tethered, broke his bridle, and upset the others. Calm was not restored until we left the precincts and got to a lower atmosphere.

Dinner was a perfect feast that night. Keith, who had been left in Camp Horseless (Cherchez Flywheel), had sent the boy to Shatin village to purchase chickens and, by the kindness of our friend at the Police Station, had them cooked. Cold chicken, Mr. Holmes's—Pork and Beans, and tinned pineapple with Carnation milk; not too bad for a camp! People have maintained that most of our supplies came out of tins, and that we did no cooking. It must be remembered, however, that we went for a Riding Camp, and not to learn the intricacies of camp cooking.

THE following night was probably the most exciting of all at the camp. At about 11 o'clock moans and groans were heard proceeding from the region of the mafoos' sleeping place, and it was not long before one of the mafoos informed us that his friend was rapidly dying, and would do so unless he received an injection within two hours.

A discussion ensued as to whether a well-placed kick might possibly cure the gentleman, or whether he was really ill; but, acting on one per cent. of doubt, three of us tramped to the Sub-station and put through a call for an ambulance.

Arriving back in camp, we despatched the two mafoos to the top of "our turning" to await the arrival of the ambulance from Kowloon. It may be noted that the dying mafoo was not too far gone to climb up a hillside which in parts was as steep as one in three!

Fresh Disturbance

Quiet again reigned in the camp, but at about 2 a.m. we were awakened by shouting from the road and flashing of torches, and Nick, feeling energetic, wandered out into the dark night to discover what all the trouble was about.

The poor ambulance men were lost amongst the streams and could not make our camp, which they had to do, apparently, to obtain a signature.

This was freely given, since it did not cost much, and information was imparted that the mafoo, upon the arrival of the ambulance, had curiously been immediately cured and did not desire to go to hospital. However, we did not want a dying man in camp, and gave instructions that he should be sent to Kowloon Hospital immediately. Little did we know of mafoos' temperaments.

WE had barely settled down again when we found both of them back in Camp, informing us that they did not require an ambulance, but would appreciate a private car! The emphasis with which Joe gave the word "no" must have been heard to be remembered.

This finished the episode; but it is an everlasting monument to the stout-heartedness of mafoos from Shanghai that neither mafoo was in camp in the morning, we subsequently learned that they had walked the seven miles back to the stables. Not bad for a man with two hours to live!

MORNING brought another pony and two Cantonese mafoos, who gave us no trouble whatsoever. The pony, whose name is "Hope," must have been named by a humorist, but we did get a little work out of him; and it is to Bob's credit that he is now a far more lively and energetic pony than previously.

That same morning we discovered a good half-mile gallop, which would have been much longer, except for an unfortunately placed nullah, which nearly caused destruction to three of us. Can you imagine the exhilaration of a full-out gallop after the ponies had been in Camp for three days, grazing all the time, and were eager for any work? Also, imagine the consternation when Bertie and Joe discovered a nullah three feet wide, about ten yards from their horse's nose, on ponies that we had not trained for jumping.

However, there was a way round, and "Utopian" and "Pasha" must be congratulated upon the excellent way in which they negotiated the bend. We hope to see some more of that gallop some day.

Planning Homeward Ride

After fifteen it was decided that our final ride on the next day would be home via Shing Mun, by hill paths, if possible; otherwise, by the main road. The difficulty, however, lay in finding a path off the Shatin Road up on to the hills and Bob, Keith, and Nick were told off to discover such a path, if it existed. We had already been informed by our friend, the O. C. Shatin Police Station, that the path started just where the blasting operations were taking place, at the new road widenings, and that the path led past the magazine.

Much wandering up and down the road, and various enquiries by Bob, who prides himself on his Cantonese, eventually led us to a very precarious pathway up the hillside, impossible to be ridden, but, with our now-found experience and confidence in our ponies, negotiable on foot.

Complications took place, however, when we found our path barred by a cow, who decided to dispute the right of way.

Since this lady was possessed of a calf, we did not wish to argue the point too much and, therefore, made a detour, leaving the horses in charge of Keith, and found that the path later became better.

Returning to the main road, Nick was extremely frightened to meet his car coming round the corner, particularly since the occupants were his wife and a girl friend.

It is an absolute fact that one does not feel equal to facing one's women folk with a three days' growth on one's face.

Inferiority complex is not in it, and it must be noted that a great sigh of relief went up when the car disappeared round the said corner.

At this moment the weather decided to turn its back upon us and within three minutes we were absolutely soaked to the skin. During this afternoon's ride new path was discovered down the camp, although we never had occasion to use it. From that time on we had nothing but rain and that night in Camp was certainly the most educating that a had.

IMAGINE a small tent, originally constructed to provide temporary shelter during dressing and undressing operation at Cele Peak, housing five men, two mafoos, a boy, and all their equipment, besides five saddles and other equestrian accoutrements. The interior of the tent was soon packed; barring a small patch of one corner, and therefore, sleeping operations being rather difficult, it was decided to sleep in the dry patch. The efforts of the other three, however, to find somewhere to put their woe selves were accompanied with much laughter, which, even if it was suppressed was sufficient to ruin the sleep of the other two.

Every possible and possible position for sleeping was experimented with that night, and it can only be recorded that we enjoyed ourselves, our regret being the short rations of "snake-bite cure" which our women folk had permitted. Beer is warming!

Camp — Broken

Dawn brought a cessation of the downpour, but no sun. Stock-taking revealed one pair of dry socks, one dry vat and a pair of dry boxing-gloves between five of us. How the boy ever made a fire with wet charcoal and wet paper must remain one of the mysteries of the East, but he did and in due course hot coffee and eggs (fresh) were brought to us; at 7.30 we broke camp and left the boy and mafoo to do the dirty work, while we made tracks for Shing Mun and tiffin. This was certainly the most enjoyable ride we had. The views were exhilarating, and the paths (on horseback) excitingly narrow and precipitous.

The ponies had certainly learned something in the four days, and were eager and willing to try anything. By 11.30, we were Bob's guest at the well-equipped Shing Mun Club, where we had a wonderful tiffin, are making tracks for home along the main road. St. George's Riding School and our Club was reached at 7 p.m.

Thus ended one of the most enjoyable holidays of my life and one which I hope to repeat in the same company in the near future.

missionary denouncing the decadent West.

It was then that Katrina, busy at the mirror, glimpsed the reflection of a solemn, gnome-like face. Impulsively she turned, even Suvarov forgotten in a moment of true Slavonic incon-sequence.

The powder puff flickered, white dust filled the air, and Tchaplina backed with a chalky nose, violently sneezing and coughing.

Instantly the girl was contrite, fearing she might have offered some unforgivable affront. Waving her aside the Lamut slowly, apprehensively approached the mirror.

Scarcely daring to breathe, Katrina waited, prepared for almost any reaction. Even so she tinkled in every nerve as the room rang to a piercing squeal.

At first she thought it was a cry of rage, and expected the cowed figure to whirl about, pouring forth invective. Instead of turning Tchaplina crept closer, until her nose touched the mirror's surface.

As her face filled the whole of the glass Katrina saw that it was split in a wide, almost toothless, smirk of glee. Within half a minute the two women, so different in breed and need, were face to face, holding hands, laughing like children.

Thus Suvarov found them
when he appeared in the doorway.
At the sound of his voice they sprang apart.

Glancing at Tchaplina he jerked his head towards the door.

"Go, and stay until you are summoned. Katrina, my Katrina, do not look so frightened. I only want to talk with you a little—and he is on his way!"

Like a night-bird recoiling from daylight Tchaplina slipped from the room.

Because her mind was primitive she felt no curiosity about the talk that would pass between them.

Questions which must have flooded the thoughts of nonhisticated womanhood never rose to consciousness. For her no mystery existed. It was enough to know that somewhere, sometime Suvarov and Katrina had met.

Hugging her knees, she crouched at the foot of a flight of steps, watching the Englishman's delicately approach as he chattered and laughed with Yukie. Her face was mask-like but her glance keen as a blade when Suvarov came out to stride towards Du-cane, palely smiling. Then the breath escaped hissing between her lips, for she read the full meaning of the smile; knew that girl's answer had been such that it left him nothing to plot but death.

While the three stood talking, in all apparent friendship, she debated the means that Suvarov might bring to his killing. To her the fact that he meant to kill was simple, natural, less exciting by far than the sight of a lipstick.

But for all its simplicity the situation demanded thought.

Her pockets were heavy with the cartridges and knife, her eyes broody with visions of sabres.

Time and again those visions dipped the scale yet the balance ever swung back to hover in uncertainty, weighed down by the strange sisterhood of women. The blood of Eve flowed in her veins as it flowed in the veins of the Russian.

Temptation still wrestled with conscience that evening as she prepared coffee in the shadows of the bare, bleak common room.
Only Suvarov and Ducane sat at the table, for the Japanese withdrew as soon as the meal ended,
while Katrina, pleading fatigue, kept to her room and supped alone.

Although she still thought him a fool, Tchaplina liked the Englishman, the fairness of his hair,
the grey eyes, and his quaint, hesitating accent. Most of the talk meant nothing to her, but her wits seized easily enough upon the only remarks that mattered.

He spoke casually, as though announcing an intended stroll.
"At dawn to-morrow I am going to fly over Klutchefskaja. The British Geophysical Society is anxious to secure good photographs of the crater."

A moment's silence, then—
"Your wife, will she enjoy flying above an active volcano six thousand feet high?"

The Englishman laughed.

"My dear man, of course she is not going with me! The trip is safe enough, otherwise I should not undertake it, but I do not imagine that it will prove very enjoyable. Turbulent air, you know, smoke, fumes and so forth."

"Fumes," echoed Suvarov reflectively. "Yes, there will be fumes. Poisonous fumes, perhaps. You are wise, Colonel, not to expose your honoured wife to such discomforts."

As he paused Tchaplina saw the same pale smile playing round the corners of his lips. He still smiled as he went on musingly:

"I have no doubt that you will find the flight exceptionally interesting. Unfortunately, I shall not be here myself to see you take off or land. I am going north to visit our post at Sedanka, and I shall start early—very early."

His gaze flickered towards Tchaplina.
"It is possible that I may bring back a sable or two."

Not a muscle of her face moved as she met his eyes, but hours later, when the midnight northern lights were flaunting, her very soul ached with a craving for sables; and when Suvarov slipped out from his hut, as she knew he would, and she trailed him to the looming airplane, the Lamut moaned faintly, whimpering like an animal in pain.

In the opinion of Colonel Du-cane there were two quite inexplicable features about the affair: why had Suvarov hidden in the cramped tail compartment of his monoplane, and whence came the creeping, anaesthetising vapour which forced him to jump for his life?

He said as much to Katrina as they stood with linked arms, unable to tear their gaze from the twisted, red hot wreckage.

"Whatever the stuff was it didn't seem to have anything to do with the volcano. It appeared to develop inside the cabin. So I simply had to trust to the 'chute and leap out. Most extraordinary.
And, dammit, what could that poor devil have been doing in the glory hole? He told me last night that he was going north this morning."

Katrina said nothing but her fingers tightened on his arm. All she knew or cared was that a shadow was lifted from her life, making love safe.

And because the spin and the fire-loft—little-undestroyed—the airman never found the piping which his would-be killer had fitted to carry exhaust fumes back into his cabin; nor did Tchaplina recover the cheap horn-handled knife that went with Suvarov on his huddled flight, deep between the shoulder blades, cold proof of that strange sisterhood outweighing many sables.

THE END.

RIOT OVER HORSE IN GERMANY

Animal Turns From Black To Grey

Berlin.

Police in the Augsburg district had to be called to quell a riot.

A farmer bought a black horse for 65 marks at the Augsburg horse fair. It rained hard on the way home and the horse turned from black to grey.

A return to the fair and the recriminations which followed necessitated the calling of the police.
Their efforts had eventually to be reinforced with the presence of troops.

table in the near future. In the meanwhile, as I have said, they have their uses in justifying bids and responses in favourable cases of distribution.

DOUBTFUL HONOUR TRICKS

(By LADY RHODES.)

IN all systems in general use,
a certain minimum high card value, apart from any distributional strength in the hand, is necessary for an opening bid of "One."

These high card tricks may be known as quick tricks or, as in the Culbertson system, honour tricks. The Culbertson table of honour tricks includes some which can be fairly described as of doubtful value, I am thinking particularly of:

K J x	1 trick.
K x	1 trick.
Q x
Q x	½ trick.
J x

I find that people who play the system are sometimes in doubt when to reckon these values. Of course, if you take the system absolutely literally you will always count them at their full value. But if you prefer, as you should, to use your own discretion, you may sometimes be doubtful whether or not to make an opening call.

Take, for instance, the K J x value compared with K Q x.
Though the former may produce a trick in the play, it has little defensive value, whereas the latter can be fairly counted worth a trick against an opponent's declaration. In deciding your opening bid I can give you a simple if unscientific hint. "Count them when it suits you, and when it doesn't don't."

For instance, holding (non vulnerable):

S—K Q 9 7 4 D—K 10
H—K J 8 6 5 C—9

It is worth while reckoning the K J x in hearts as a trick. The hand is strong distributionally, i.e., in playing tricks; and the holding is in the major suits.

On the other hand, with:
S—K Q 9 7 D—K 10 4
H—K J 8 6 C—9 3

though the honour strength is the same, the hand is distributionally weak.

Again, with:
S—K 10 D—K Q 9 7 4
H—9 C—K J 8 6 5
It is better to pass, owing to the major suit weakness.

Not Justified

It is not advisable to count two of these doubtful values in making up your minimum high card strength. For instance, if, in the first example, the spade holding were K J 9 7 4, the hand would be too weak in defensive value to justify an opening bid.

The same consideration applies to the partner's response to an opening bid. If, in response to an opening of One Club by your partner, you hold

S—K J 2 D—K Q 4
H—A Q 8 C—J 9 6 2

a Three No Trump response is justified.

But, should the hand be:
S—K J D—K J 4
H—A Q 8 C—9 6 5 2

Two No Trumps is enough.
Here is an example, including a doubtful honour trick, of an opening bid of One No Trump:

S—K Q 7 D—K 9 6 5
H—A 10 4 C—Q 8 6

On the other hand, with:
S—K Q 7 D—K 9 6 2
H—A 10 4 C—8 6 5 3

although the number of honour tricks is still three, there are two doubtful values and the hand is not strong enough for a bid.

The Safer Answer

It is very important not to reckon these doubtful values in response to an opening forcing bid.
For instance, if your partner opens
Two Hearts and you hold:

S—K Q 8 D—K 8 5 4
H—9 6 2 C—7 6 2

a response of Three No Trumps is justified, but should the spade holding be K J 8, the safer answer is Two No Trumps.

From my experience in playing,
I find that there is an increasing tendency to disregard these doubtful values in estimating the strength of the hand, and I should not be surprised to see them discarded in the near future.

NEW ITALIAN ATTITUDE CAUSES MUCH UNEASINESS

UNFRIENDLY TALKS ON WIRELESS

ADRIATIC PORT BEING STRENGTHENED

Belgrade, Yesterday.
Official quarters here are most uneasy in regard to the attitude of Italy. It is learned that the Yugoslav Government yesterday made representations to Rome in regard to what are considered unfriendly comments contained in Italian broadcasts on the situation in Yugoslavia, where, an Italian broadcaster, on Thursday, said and suggested that a disruption is imminent.

It is confidently hoped that the matter will be satisfactorily settled.

Meanwhile, however, it is reported that the Italian garrison at the Adriatic port of Zara has been strongly reinforced. This is regarded here as unnecessary and not tending to improve the Italo-Yugoslav relations. It is also firmly believed that the Italians are supporting the Croatian revolutionaries.—Reuter.

SENSATIONAL CONFESSION

Novak said that his name was really Hospice. He had been sentenced to death during his absence from Yugoslavia for murders, and had sheltered in a refugee camp in Hungary, where he had been trained in terrorist activities. He received a special mission, and went with two other Croats to Zurich, where they joined the Assassins, Kelen, and another Croat named Shilny.

All five went to Fontainebleau, where they split into two groups, Hospice and two others going to

Spot 24-7/16 24-3/8
Forward 24-9/16 24-1/2

SILVER MONEY CIRCULATION RECORD IN U.S.

The Commerce Department reports that U.S.$2,542,426 worth of silver was imported for the week ended October 5, including U.S.$1,545,591 from the United Kingdom and U.S.$1,154,691 from China, all of which presumably found its way to the Treasury. Exports amounted to U.S.$63,646.

Silver imports for the first week in October were far below those of the corresponding week of September, indicating at least a temporary slackness in the Government's buying programme abroad.—United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

Paris, while Kelen and Shilny went to Marseilles.

Hospice admitted that if he had received orders to execute King Alexander he would not have hesitated to carry them out.

Yugoslavia is almost sure to bring the matter to the notice of the League of Nations, especially as the Yugoslav Government last April called the attention of the League to the fact that Croat refugees in Hungary had formed an organization for terrorism in Yugoslavia.

It is alleged that the conspirators had three plans. If the Marseilles outrage failed, an attempt was to be made to wreck the Royal train at Lyons. Finally, a pistol and bomb attempt would have been made in Paris.—Reuter.

Seraphim Strelkoff, the famous Russian baritone, will give a recital of Russian songs from Z.B.W.'s Studio from 9.30 to 10 p.m. to-night.

INFLATION SENTIMENT DEPRESSED

TRADING FACTORS ON WALL STREET

GASOLINE WAR CONTINUES

SPECIAL TO SUNDAY HERALD.

New York, Yesterday.

President Roosevelt's denial of impending dollar devaluation is expected to depress the inflation sentiment which has accumulated on the New York Market since Wednesday.

Favourable factors to-day were that the General Counsel of the N. R. A., Mr. Donald Richberg, said that the steel industry does not plan any Code changes, retaining the price and wage schedules, and that Messrs. Sears, Roebuck, for the four weeks ended October 8, report sales amounting to U. S. $31,201,216, as against U.S.$26,311,738 last year.

An unfavourable factor was that the Standard Oil Company of New York has reduced tank car gasoline by half a cent per gallon.

Wall Street considers that the Treasury's ultra-orthodox calling of U.S.$1,870,000,000 worth of Fourth Liberty Bonds 4 1/2 per cent, for redemption on April 15, is interpreted as another denial of inflation.

The consensus of business sentiment disapproves that Mr. Upton Sinclair will be elected Governor of California.—United Press, per S. E. Levy & Co.

SPECIAL DOUGLAS PLANES

accommodation for eight passengers. The planes are fitted with two motors mounted above the wings, and have a cruising speed of 150 miles an hour. They are constructed to withstand the cyclonic weather along the China coast. Equipped with wireless, the monoplane is capable of blind flying in the event of a fog.

Two pilots of the China National Aviation Corporation recently returned to Shanghai after having completed courses in blind flying in Florida.
